STANDS ON SITE OF FAMOUS INN

Inns of Court Hotel, London, Is About To Be Demolished.

LONDON, Feb. 7.—Within a few weeks, or perhaps a little longer, if the present building trades dispute is protracted, the work of demolition will be begun on the inns of Court Hotel, in Holborn, the site of which was recently purchased by the government for a new and much needed telephone exchange. Thus will disappear a building which, aside from its associations with the law—Lincoln's Inn Fields being directly at its rear—has little historic interest but which for many years has stood on the site of one of the most famous hostelries in London. For the Inns of Court Hotel began life in quite another form as the Blue Boar of Plantagenet times, taking its name from the crest of the De Veres who owned most of the land thereabout. Later it added the title of "The George," when its chief rival the "George Inn," was demolished in Queen Anne's time.

It was at the old Blue Boar and George that Cromwell, disguised as a trooper, stopped and searched a man about to set out for Dover, and discovered in his saddle bag the letter which determined him on King Charles the First's execution.

The Blue Boar and George gained a notorious name as the inn at which the more noble of the highwaymen stopped on their way to execution from Newgate prison, situated on the site now covered by the New Old Bailey, to Tyburn tree, which stood in the middle of the road about where the Marble Arch now is. It was their custom to drink as much sherry as their purses permitted, and even more in many cases. As Swift wrote:

"As clever Tom Clinch when the rabble was bawling,
Rode stately thru Holborn to die of his calling,
He stopt at the 'George' for a bottle of sack,
And promised to pay for it when he came back."

The charges of the Blue Boar and George were beyond the common malefactors of those days, and they journeyed a little further, to Seven Dials, before spending their last halfpence on ale to stupefy themselves for the final ordeal.

QUEEN MARY HAS MAGNIFICENT FURS

LONDON, Feb. 7).—Queen Mary has had many opportunities of showing off her wonderful furs. These are of immense value, and are the favorite part of her wardrobe. Her majesty is often chaffed by members of her family about her fancy for fur and fur-trimmed garments.

Last summer the King was asked what he thought she would wear for a yachting trip in the Solent. "Well," he replied, with a merry twinkle in his eye, "I am not quite sure, but I think it will be something with fur on it." Oddly enough, she does not care for ermine. She once suggested that dark fur would look much more imposing than ermine as a trimming for the robes of peers and peeresses. Included in her majesty's collection is a splendid set of Russian sables, given her by the emperor and empress of Russia; and a long coat made of choice sable, that was a present from the King in the coronation year, 1911. The Queen's motoring coat is also a marvel of the furrier's art. It is made up of thousands of tails, each so perfectly matched and joined, that it looks like one large piece of fur, even when subjected to the closest scrutiny. Her majesty's kind heart causes her to avoid broadtail, on account of the cruelty.

Lady Gibson receives today at Government House from 4.30 to 6 o'clock.

The largest, smartest and most representative musicale given for years, in the most beautiful surroundings, was given by Colonel and Mrs. Albert Gooderham last night in Columbus Hall, which was carpeted with green and eastern rugs; a plethora of comfortable armchairs and sofas, covered with green, were scattered about, polished tables with masses of narcissi, daffodils and tulips between; the platform at the side of the room was banked with palms and pink azaleas. The program, which goes without saying, was the best obtainable in Toronto. Supper was served upstairs at eleven o'clock from tables arranged with daffodils and lights shaded to match, over four hundred being present, the young people ending with a dance. Colonel and Mrs. Gooderham received their guests at the entrance to the ballroom, the latter looking lovely in a gown of emerald and silver brocade, draped with real lace, exquisite pearls and green and silver butterfly in her beautifully dressed hair; others of the family present were: Capt. and Mrs. Gooderham, the latter in white satin, lace and crystal, with a girdle of pink velvet; Dr. Burson, Mrs. Burson, white satin, white diamante and diamond ornaments; Miss Marietta Gooderham, very pretty in white satin, with a crystal tunic and pearls; Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Duncanson, the latter in blue and gold; Mr. Melville Gooderham.

MISS PARKER'S STUDIO.

Miss Edythe Parker, who has had charge of the dancing department at the Hambourg Conservatory, is now teaching at her private studio, 572 Jarvis street, exclusively.

Salad to Serve With Game.

Peel and slice two apples, add the pulp of four tangerine oranges, and then add as much cut-up celery as there are apple and tangerine together. Sprinkle over with a little celery salt. Now add one banana (sliced) and half a cupful of blanched and well chopped walnuts, flavor with celery salt and pepper and stir slightly with a fork. For a dressing put one cupful of sour cream into a basin. Stir in gradually half a cupful of melted butter, the juice of a lemon, carefully drop by drop, and the whisked whites of two eggs.

Ivory Blanc Mange.

Take milk, one quart; gelatine, one ounce; flavoring, two heaping tablespoonfuls; white sugar, three-quarters of a cupful.

Take one quart of milk, one ounce of gelatine, a tablespoonful of almond flavoring, with a tablespoonful of rose water, three-fourths of a cup of white sugar. Heat the milk to boiling, turn in the gelatine, which should have been previously heated for an hour in a cup of the milk; add the flavoring, and stir all together ten minutes before putting in the sugar. As soon as the gelatine has dissolved, remove from the fire, strain thru a thin muslin bag, wet a mold with cold water, pour the blanc mange into it, and set in a cold place till solid.

Cherry Pudding.

One-half cup butter, 1 cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup water, 1 teaspoonful baking powder and 1 cup flour. Put 2 spoonfuls of batter in cup, then 2 or 3 tablespoonfuls of cherries (having all the juice drained off); then cover cherries with more batter, place cups in a steamer and steam until done (about one hour). This will make six large cups.

Sauce—One cup sugar, ½ cup butter; mix well, then take 1 tablespoonful flour and mix with a little cold water. Add one pint of boiling water to the flour and water, then add to sugar and butter and cook. Flavor with vanilla, or, if liked, in place of vanilla, add ½ cup of maple syrup. (This is very nice).

HOME HELPS

If the top of the kerosene lamp becomes loosened, it may often be effectually tightened by applying a little melted alum.

A recipe for axle grease is a pound of tallow, half a pound of castor oil, quarter of a pound of blackleaf. Melt the tallow and rub the whole well together.

It is a convenience to make vegetable bags of cheesecloth, into which you put celery, tomatoes, lettuce and other fresh vegetables before placing in the refrigerator.

When making sago pudding, allow three dessertspoonfuls for each pint of milk; let all soak two hours before cooking.

The wonderful nature-fertilized volcanic soil of the Island of Ceylon imparts to tea a delightful fragrance and delicious flavor. The uniformly excellent quality of "Salada" Tea bears testimony to this fact.
