

The first of any note above Quebec, for there are none below, is Jeunne Lorette; it lies nine miles north west of Quebec, and contains fifty log houses, inhabited by French and some Indians, there is a decent chapel in this village.

The village of Trois Rivières, is situate on the north bank of the St. Laurence, extends three fourths of a mile long, and contains seventy houses and a church.

Charlebourg is situate eighty miles east of Lorette, and is something larger.

The village of William Henry or Sorel is agreeably situate at the confluence of the Sorel or Chambly river with the St. Laurence, and contains a Protestant and Roman Catholic house for divine worship.

Some distance above Sorel, is situate Vercheres; it contains about forty houses.

Sault Saint Louis, is a small village of about one hundred and fifty houses, inhabited chiefly by the Iroquois or Mohawk Indians. It is about sixteen miles above Montreal, and was originally built for those Indians, who have long been converted to the christian religion. It is chiefly built of stone. The church and dwelling of the missionaries are protected by a stone wall, in which there are loop holes for musquetry.

Point aux Trembles village is fifty-one miles from Quebec, contains one hundred and twenty houses, a small convent of nuns, and a neat church.

The village of the Cedars is charmingly situated on the St. Laurence, not far above Montreal; it contains about fifty houses.

The Canasatego village of the Iroquois, a Mohawk, and Algonquin tribes of Indians, is situate on a delightful point of land on the hills, on the east side of the two mountains, in the Ottawas river. Near the extremity of the Point, their church is built, which di-
