"The Gingerbread Man"—Princess.
This week will take good rank in the annals of the Princess' season—that is if any count can be taken of the applause bestowed on "The Gingerbread Man," who bobbled on to the stage last night after the charming stage last night after the charming Concerto in D minor .... Wieniawski Caramelita, the most marvelous of all Allegro moderato, as a "Fanciful Fairyesque." It corresponds in type to the pantomime that is so popular at Yuletide in England, and because of its quaint topsey turveydom, would not be amiss at the vaudeville in London, where plays of this type has been as a second of the part of the pa fairies, had waved her magic wand. veydom, would not be amiss at the vaudeville in London, where plays of this type have especially gone ahead of the veydom, would not be amiss at the vaudeville in London, where plays of the veydom, would not be amiss at the vaudeville in London, where plays of the value of the plot that will please the children at a period when Christmas is near, and also the children of an older growth, for whom a little nonsense is good by way of an antidote. There is plenty of good singing, and there are melodies that linger on the ear. There are two or three of these that will push "The Gingerbread Man" along the road of success. One of these is "Maisie," but what will especially take is that which the Deities last night late years. There is a straight simple plot that will please the children at a period when Christmas is near, and whistled trippingly on the tongue—"John Dough." That is the Ginger-bread's little plum. "Nursery Rhymes," too, is catching. You couldn't find yourself in more congenial quarters than in Santa Claus Land, in which you see, amongst other interesting establishments, the baker's shop, in which the Gingerbread Man comes to life, and also a nursery rhyme factory, which apparently is worked free of combines. It is during this phase of imaginary life that you meet Jack Horner, a humble baker's apprentice, who loves and is loved by Mazie Bon Bon, a confectioner's sales girl. They would undoubtedly have been married and lived happy ever after if it had not been for the unholy Machevalius Fudge, who has the evil eye, and, who recognizing the girl as the daughter of is that which the Deities last night whistled trippingly on the tongue-This opened general discussion. Ald Dunn gave the opinion that a report should be received from Judge Winchester upon the original charges, and that to burden the case and delay matters would be a great injustice to Ald Lynd. Ald Lynd was presumed in the minds of some to be guilty, and in the minds of others to be innocent, and a verdict should be given for or against. Almyra Forrest, in the role of Mazie, sings and acts beautifully. Another sang particularly well.

The staging is fine.

"Sky Farm"—Grad.

"Sky Farm" is a pretty pastoral play that has been here before and needs no introduction. It pleased a large audience at the Grand last night, and should draw good houses all week, who said there should be a verdict being a clean and wholesome play. There is the usual smooth city villain, whose machinations are brought to naught. The plot revolves around the marriage of Warren Bruce with Marrigold Towers.

The plot revolves around the marriage of Warren Bruce with marriage of the right to the plot for that he may not lose the fortune that he is to inherit at the age of 21, the marriage is kept secret, and complications result which are in the end happily straightened out. There are the usual rustic chaarcters and much amusement is created during the course of the lay, which is in feur

Julian Rose, who has the centre of the stage most of the time, requires no introduction to the Toronto public. Her portrayal of the honest Hebrew classes amongst the best. He is at all times thoughtful, characteristic and manly. He does not burlesque the character, as so many others do, and his performance is a treat. The play requires a large number of characters, perhaps more than is carried by the ordinary melodramatic company. Nothing to good can be said of Miss Portl C. Seward, who is perhaps fortunately cast for the advenutres. Miss Seward in this piece bears out her well-known reputation as leading actress. Fut amongst the real actors there is one John A. Lawrence, who plays the actual role of the advance agent. His

"High School Girls,"—Star.

This week's attraction at the Star, the "High School Girls,, is a commendable production, and a large audience greeted it Monday night. The girls seem prettler than the usual rtn and all the costumes and stage settings are decidedly new and attractive.
