ROGET WANTED TO REPLY.

Picquart Said About the Quenelli Case. Generals Roget and Mercler having inti-nated a desire to speak, Col. Jouaust asked

Dreyfus if he had anything to say, and Dreyfus if he had anything to say, and the prisoner replied in the negative. General Roget then mounted the plat-form and asked Col. Picquart for explana-tions regarding the Quenelli affair. "Colonel Picquart," said General Roget, "attacked me this morning in regard to my speech for the prosecution yesterday on the sub-ject of the Quenelli case. He said he was not present at the Ministry of War when the case was in progress and he ascribed Col. Picquart if he denies that he wrote Capt. Marechal an order to connect him with Galanti; that he wrote to the public prosecutor enclosing documents, and that he wrote to the public prosecutor a second time, July 15. If he denies this, I ask the court to send for Marechal and the dossier in the Quenell affair." No Need to Threaten. Col. Picquart replied that there was no need to threaten to produce the dossier in order to make him reply. He added: "I did not say I was absent during the Que-relin affair. I said I was absent part of the time, and that painful duties did not per-mit me to participate in it, as I would otherwise have done." "Did you write those letters?" asked Col. Jounust. "Yes," replied Picquart, "I remember Ves." replied Picquart, "I remember ting letters in the case, though I do remember exactly their terms or or " not remember exactly their terms or dates."

Col. Jouaust then said: "General Röget asks if you deny you wrote a letter sending Galanti," replied the witness, "was an agent, who gave us information about the Italian forts in the neighborhood of Belfort. Finding ourselves on the point of being discovered, we naturally took measures to avoid it. That is why Galanti was sent to Switzerland."
"Then you wrote the letters," said General Röget, "and I add that Col. Henry was not concerned in this affair. He was sent to Belfort against his will by Col. Piequart."

He Wrote Some Letters. The witness acknowledged writing some thers, but wanted to know their text. He id he would like to see them, so that he uld be more precise. "You must have en," he said, "how much falschood there is been in this affair." In reply to further questions, Picquart imitted sending documents to Belfort for e use of the Quenelli case. "But," Pic-art added, "they were handed to the thile prosecutor." General Roget's questioning was evidently the view of eliciting the confession om Col. Picquart that in the Quenelli se he communicated to the judges docu-ents unknown to the defence, as he now cuses the general staff of doing in the reyfus case. The general concluded with angrily re-illing various statements of Picquart in gard to his connection with the press, id a dialogue apparently wholly uncon-cted with the present trial followed. guaranteed. Col. Maurel. I never mentioned secret documents to him." In reply Col. Ficquart said: "I remember perfectly handing a packet to Maurel." General Mercier next denied Col. Fic-quart's statement relative to the meeting with General Gonse, during the afternoon of Jan. 6, 1895, when the latter was great-ivy excited at the prospect of war. "That cannot be the case," said General Mercier, "General Gonse will make a de-position on the subject. I do not know what

THE ROBERT SIMPSON COMPANY, SATURDAY. The Best in Dress Goods.

No matter what the fashion books say is the most stylish for fall and winter wear, we were there before the fashion books were written. Months ago the designs were in progress of evolution -being thought out, worked out, improved upon by master minds in the art of dress goods making. You seldom know who they are, don't even care. Your interest centres in getting something nobody else has, and paying little enough for it.

The range of styles answers every demand of carriage, street, and travelling costumes, house dresses and evening wear. It is no half-hearted collection. Complete in every particular, a decided improvement on any past ; perfectly adapted to the needs and conditions of a most varied constituency-we feel assured of your appreciation and subsequent trade.

Whether in dress goods or anything else, our specific object is to make one purchaser bring another. That's what we call trade-building.
