Municipal Nominations at Markham
Next Monday Promise to Be Rather Quiet.

TWO COUNCILLORS WILL RETIRE

Death of Jonathan Lemon of Newmarket Removes Pioneer From Whitechurch Township.

Toronto Junction, Dec. 25.—Christmas Day was very quietly observed here. Service was held in the churches in the morning, and the afternoon was largely spent in visiting friends. The Annetts-street skating rink was well patronized, and several hundreds were there in the afternoon and evening.

The Comfort Soap Company employees last night presented their manager, J. R. Alouscar of Quebec-avenue, with a handsome Morris chair. Rev. Dr. Potts will preach an educational sermon at Annetts-street Methodist Church on Sunday evening. A collection in aid of the Educational Society's work will be taken up.

Braconade.

The anniversary services of Zion Methodist Church will be held on Sunday, when singing will be augmented by the Bathurst-street orchestra. Rev. Mr. Houghton will preach at 11 a.m., William H. Hinks at 2 p.m., and Prof. J. Burwash at the evening service. Yarmouth Lodge, S.O.B.S., will sit under these officers during next year: President, T. Heron; vice-president, H. Elmer; chaplain, Rev. A. S. Sager; secretary, E. B. Houghton; trustees, R. P. Nett and C. Sharpley; hospital delegate and committeeman, A. Edwards.

Woodbridge.

Mr. McBride and Miss Evans, the retiring teachers from the school, were each made the recipients of addresses and gifts at the closing exercises. The municipal nominations on Monday are likely to be very quiet. There is very little talk of a new school. Councillor J. J. Watson and William Gordon, who have each served four years, will not offer themselves for re-election.

James Pax, humorist; George Grant, the Scottish tenor; and John and Irish selections; J. Gardner and W. Payne will furnish the Scottish concert. The auspices of Maclean Camp, Sons of Scotland, on New Year's night, Jan. 1.

The Humber Summit Sabbath school will hold their Christmas entertainment and tree on Monday night. "A Trip Around the World," illustrated by 150 light views, will be the feature of the program. John McGroarty of Woodbridge will give his experience of the South African war at the eagerly expected meeting on Tuesday evening. J. W. St. John, M.L.A., will occupy the chair, and A. J. Heydon, Toronto Journalist, will read. Misses McMullen, Woodbridge; J. Geddes, Woodbridge; C. Manning, Vincent; Rolfe Harris, Woodbridge; J. B. Barger and others will furnish the entertainment.

Markham.

The funeral of the late John Miller will take place on Saturday, at 2 p.m., at St. Andrew's Church Cemetery. Miss N. M. Miller has resigned from the teaching staff of the Markham High School.

John Forster, tax collector, reports that unpaid taxes in Markham Village total $284.33. Municipal matters in Markham are growing more interesting. For the time being, E. H. Wilson, W. J. Kline and Reeve Henry Mann will probably be the candidates. For the Council a number of names are suggested. The township Abner Summerfield will take the field against all comers. Councillors Harper and Morrison will seek re-election; Anson Croxley, W. H. Lapp, Edward Francis and A. W. Urmy.

Newmarket.

Within the past six months 108 new members have been initiated into the Royal Templars of Temperance in this village. A public meeting will be held in the Town Hall on Saturday at 3 p.m., to consider the question of building a sugar refinery and the culture of the sugar beet. A representative gathering is expected.

Mr. Fallis was called to Cartwright a few days ago by the death of his grandmother, who was more than 70 years of age at the time of her demise. A Christmas service will be held on Sunday in the Methodist Church, morning and evening. The Sunday school tea will be served in the Town Hall on Monday evening.

Court Signet, I.O.F., meets on Monday evening at 8 p.m.

The election of officers will take place. A memorial service will be held at the Gospel Temperance rooms on Sunday for the late Mrs. Boddy. The meeting will be conducted by the W.C.T.U.

YERKES TELESCOPE BURNED.

Large Reflecting Instrument at Williams Bay Destroyed.

Williams Bay, Wis., Dec. 25.—The large reflecting telescope of the Yerkes Observatory was destroyed by fire yesterday with many valuable instruments. The loss is estimated at $25,000, on which there is no insurance. The telescope was in a separate structure about a hundred yards south of the observatory building. It consisted of one room in which were the large mirrors, driving clock and other appliances, and a structure 120 feet long extending to the southwest, all together forming a reflecting telescope with a length of 120 feet.

The telescope was not quite completed, the machinists not having finished setting up the instruments. It was designed by Prof. Hale and intended for use in connection with the spectroheliograph designed by him and constructed in the observatory workshop. Many valuable results were expected from its use.

The fire was probably caused by electric wires. Prof. Hale says that steps will be taken at once to replace the outfit.

MULE SAVES LIFE OF A BOY.

Runs to Foot of Shaft and Mines Go to Land's Rescue.

Wilkes-Barre, Pa., Dec. 25.—Intelligence marked the part played by a mule in the saving of a life in the Powderly Mine, at Carbondale, today. Charles Carden, a driver boy, fell from a car and fractured a leg. Henry Jones saved Carden from drowning by leaning over the edge and grasping his coat collar, but he was unable to pull him out. They were far from help, but with presence of mind young Jones' untimely fall was the means of saving his life. The mule at the foot of the shaft would spread the alarm. It did, and in a short time the appearance of the mule and rescued the boys.

New York, Dec. 25.—Nate Salsbury, who owned the controlling interest in Buffalo Bill's Wild West Show, died in his Liberty-street home in Long Branch at 8:30 o'clock last night. Mr. Salsbury had been in failing health for some time, but was able to be around and superintend his business until a week ago. He suffered from a stomach trouble, which caused his death.

Nate Salsbury was one of the most celebrated showmen of his day. He was the man who "led" William F. Cody and made him known throughout the world as "Buffalo Bill."

Not a Nauseating Pill.

The excipient of a pill is the substance which encloses the ingredients and makes up the pill mass. That of Farnell's Vegetable Pills is so compounded as to preserve their moisture, and they are carried into my latitude without impairing their strength. Many pills are so compounded as to cause nausea, and are so prepared that they are agreeable to the most delicate.

The Weakest Thing.

Which is the weakest thing of all? Mine heart can ponder? The sun a little less than a mile from dark darkness yonder? The cloud, a little wind can move Where'er it listeth? The wind, a little leaf above, The mere resisteth? What time that yellow leaf was green, My days were gladder; But now, whatever spring may mean, I must grow sadder. Ah! me! a leaf with sighs can wring My lips asunder. Then, in my heart, the weakest thing I feel can ponder. Yet, heart, when sun and cloud are joined, And drop together, And at a blast which is not wind The forests wither, Thou, from the darkening deathly course To glory breakest. The strongest of the universe Guarding the weakest. —Elizabeth Barrett Browning.

Christmas at Pincher Creek.

The Regeneration of Red Life.

Red Life was a coward. At least Pincher Creek said he was, and their estimate was usually correct on qualities of courage. There is something in the invigorating atmosphere of the mountains that makes men, and it was a rough-and-ready crowd to be found around Pincher Creek. Nestling in the shadow of the Rockies a hundred miles from Calgary, and cut off from intercourse with the world, the miners and the cattle men were still enjoying their Christmas. The saloons were doing a rushing business. A man with a slouch hat and a corduroy suit occupied a corner of Big Red's saloon. A livid scar across his face glowed as if afire. It was Red Life, the coward. He had been picked up by a coyote in Manitoba to handle a point of view. Red Life's recommendations were carried on his face and in his holsters. The rancher needed a rough character to "stand off" any inquisitive people who wanted to know the herd making the water holes along the route. A man with such a hideous scar, rendering his expression so evil, must be quick on the trigger. In fact, the big guns he carried emphasized this estimate. He said as much as Red Life, and out there where one name was as good as another in those pioneer days. It made no difference. There were some tough men in the bar outfit, but they took it for granted that Red Life was a killer and accepted his corduroy suit and slouch hat. This marked him as an unusual sort of fellow, and it did not increase his popularity. Then, too, he said he couldn't afford it; but somehow the boys could not understand it. Red Life, since liquor was one of the staples of the country. Then, too, Red Life wrote letters and occasionally resolved one. "This new considered peculiar. Evidently he had folks 'back East.' Some of the other boys, too, but their exact location and names were never mentioned. Red Life had been seen several times putting money in envelopes and sending it away. All this looked very queer to some of the rough chaps of Pincher Creek, and they were free to intimate that he might occasionally stand treat instead of being so stingy. Over on Sheep Creek, a driver boy, fell from a car and fractured a leg. One of the herdsmen had been offended by Life and abused him frightfully. In these days a word was followed by a blow, and then the quiet man lived to tell the story; but the cow puncher with the scarred face had not resented the insult. "The boys could not believe it. He had his guns on too. Then the calm took on a look of "stare" the "talk" of a man, just because he thought it would go, and it did. After that Red Life's position was established. He was a coward, and Pincher Creek could imagine no viler epithet. The Pax X outfit had no use for him that night. The foreman wasted little sympathy in telling him so. However, the foreman was a discerning English chap, and he marked the next day to one of the men that Red Life was a puzzle to him.

"Somehow, Bowls, Red Life don't look to me as if he were a coward; I can't understand it. He observed that the coward of Pincher Creek was in hard lines that fall. Just how he picked up a living no one seemed to know. He had a snarl over in the forebush and did a little freighting, but he was seen frequently sending money East thru the mails. It was said that he was really going hungry in order to keep up those remittances. A passing rancher found Life's hat and coat under the eaves of his house in sight. He had remarked to the owner of the dairy dwelling that the coat must be saved up as a prize. The discarded cowboy observed grimly that no wolf had better come prowling around his place or he would eat him.

Saturday was Christmas. The day before Red Life walked into town and went over to the postoffice. The stage had just arrived. He stood apart with his hands in his ragged coat pockets and spoke to him. For some reason he felt strangely uneasy. He was the last in the line, and the clerk handed him a letter. Life started convulsively, and the livid scar deepened. There was a black border on the envelope. His long fingers clutched it spasmodically, and with feverish haste he tore open the ominous-looking missive. His tall figure seemed to shiver up as he glanced at the contents. As he pushed his way aimlessly thru the crowd the crushed letter fell from his nervous hands. He pulled his slouch hat closer over his eyes. There was a suspicious moisture in his eye. A tear trickled down thru the big scar. He hastily brushed it away.

A man less absorbed than others observed the coward's emotion. "Red Life's got bad news in that letter," he remarked to a friend.

The subject of the conversation passed on down the street, convulsions to his rest, and the crowd of the big crowd of lowly spirits were crushed. He turned into a saloon and sank into an obscure corner.

"Huh! here's the town coward," called Jack Petrus, with a leer, as he caught sight of the man who had just over, knocked the big fellow's chair over. The laugh changed to a roar of excitement. "What a sight to see! The coward of Pincher Creek, the coward of the town, the coward of the whole crowd, yet he had never exhibited any resentment. Now he stood like an enraged tiger ready to fight the whole crowd. Two or three friends of Prince pushed forward as if to interfere. Life offered to accommodate them all, but somehow they did not care for trouble that night.

The foreman of the ranch sauntered over and slaved the angry man on the back after the crowd grew quiet. "Say, partner, he remarked, 'when I discharged you I thought you were a puzzle. I never believed you a coward. What a sight to see! The coward of Pincher Creek, the coward of the town, the coward of the whole crowd, yet he had never exhibited any resentment. Now he stood like an enraged tiger ready to fight the whole crowd. Two or three friends of Prince pushed forward as if to interfere. Life offered to accommodate them all, but somehow they did not care for trouble that night.
