

SUNDAY WORLD MEN, AT SIXTY MILES AN HOUR, SNAP CITY'S ROOF

THE FUNNELS ON THE STEAMERS INTERESTED THE PASSENGER WHEN THE FLYING BOAT UNEXPECTEDLY SWOOPED DOWN OVER THE FOOT OF YONGE STREET.

EXCEPT FOR A LACK OF LIFE, THIS IS HOW HANLAN'S POINT APPEARED TO THE MEN IN THE FLYING BOAT THE DAY THEY DETRACTED THE ATTENTION OF THOUSANDS FROM THE OPENING BALL GAME.

T. C. Macaulay, the aviator who took The World men up — note the aneroid barometer strapped to his knee — and D. K. Billings, The Sunday World man. The picture was taken just after Macaulay brought the flying boat down from an altitude record flight with passenger.

A FILMY VEIL OF SMOKE HUNG OVER THE INDUSTRIAL SECTION AT THE EAST END OF THE BAY AND MADE THE OUTLINES OF THE BUILDINGS VAGUE. THE PHOTO SHOWS CHERRY STREET, KING STREET, PART OF THE GAS COMPANY PLANT ON ONE SIDE AND THE C.N.R. YARDS ON THE OTHER. THE INSET SHOWS THE EDITOR OF THE SUNDAY WORLD, SNAPPED AS THE FLYING BOAT MOVED SLOWLY FROM ITS HANGAR ON THE WESTERN SANDBAR.

A SILENT HORDE OF TRAINS AND SMOKE-BLACKENED BUILDINGS WERE CAUGHT BY THE CAMERA AS THE BOAT SWUNG HIGH OVER THE UNION STATION.

THE SOUTHERN END OF THE BUSINESS SECTION AS IT APPEARS FROM A THOUSAND FEET UP. ST. LAWRENCE MARKET IS IN THE CENTRE OF THE PICTURE AND FROM IT THE LOCATION OF OTHER LANDMARKS CAN BE GAUGED.
