HOCKEY.

St. Patricks, 4; Hamilton, 2.
Hamilton, Ont. Jan. 12.—St. Patricks of Toronto scored another victory over Hamilton here tonight, in the roughest game yet staged in the new arena. The score, four to two, was not a fair indication of the night's play, for Hamilton forward division out-skated and out-played the Toronto forwards, but the great work of the St. Patricks defense was in goal, giving a wonderful exhibition, made it possible for the Saints to win. Both of Hamilton's goals were scored by Joe Malone, who has tallied all the goals made by Hamilton on the home ice since he joined the team last week.

Of the visitors, Stewart, the Maritime province player, who made his first appearance in St. Pat's uniform was one of the stars. He played on the defence with Cameron and made several spectacular rushes during the night.

Ottawa, 2; Canadiens, 0.
Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Thrill followed thrill throughout the entire sixty minutes of play at the Arena here tonight when the Ottawa Senators, leaders in the honors in the first half of the National Hockey League hockey schedule, defeated their old rivals, the Canadiens, by a score of 2 to 0.

HOW THE TROTTERS AND PACERS CAME

Secretary Gocher of the N. T. A. Tells of Development—Horse Not Native to America.

(Toronto Mail and Empire.)

In these days of motor cars, airplanes and balloonists drifting for a thousand miles and then having their lives saved by a howling dog less sensational sources of transportation are likely to fall into abeyance. Yet despite this, the horse and cross-Atlantic flight the people seem to keep a love for the horse. Last year we saw or read of one of the greatest horses in history, Man of War, and now let us think for a moment of even a greater horse, the horse that founded the breed of trotters and pacers which has made more money for Canadians as well as Americans than any thoroughbred that has been foaled. The horse in question is Rysdyk's Hambletonian, founder to whom some references have been made in a recent article in the New York Herald by Mr. W. H. Gocher, secretary of the National Trotting Association, and one of the best authorities on the trotting horse. The story of course, is not a new one, but Mr. Gocher tells it vividly and recalls facts that even a veteran harness horseman may have forgotten. If indeed, he ever was aware of them. For example, he mentions the Rhode Island early in the eighteenth century, which could navigate a mile in a little more than two minutes, according to the record of contemporary clergymen.

No Native Horses.

The horse was not native to this continent. Every horse that was ever foaled here was either imported or was the progeny of imported ancestors, despite the fact that there were a few wild horses. The original importer was De Soto, the Spanish adventurer and explorer, who in 1539 brought to the new continent more than two hundred cavalry horses. After his death the horses that had not been killed were turned loose and from them, and from crosses from other imported herds, descended the broncho. The De Soto horses probably had Arab or Turkish blood in them, obviously they were about the average of the horses that were bred in England. They found their way to the United States where they could live outdoors all the year round and thrive, and they multiplied.

Messenger and Belfounder.

Nearly a hundred years later New England imported her first horses from England and Ireland, and it was from these that the early pacer was produced. In those days vehicles were few and clumsy, and people who used horses rode them, and not less than a century ago all pacing and trotting races were to be saddle. Puritanism, however, did its best to destroy the breed by making racing unlawful, and it was not until after the American Revolution that the horse got a real start. By that time descendants of the De Soto horses had been brought north, and were bred to the English stallions which had been imported by the gentry. It was only a century ago that the horse was brought into the city championship on the previous

J. E. TIGHE HEADS LABOR FEDERATION

Officers Elected at Yesterday's Session—Resolutions on Legislation—Visitors Dined

J. E. Tighe, of this city, was elected president of the New Brunswick Federation of Labor at yesterday afternoon's session of the eighth annual convention. Reports of the committees on legislation and constitution and by-laws took up the greater part of the session. Last evening the visiting delegates were guests of the St. John Trade and Labor Council in the Prince William Hotel.
