HENRY VIVIAN TELLS OF BUILDING PLAN

Co-operative Societies in England Have Expended $50,000,000 in the Construction of Houses for Laborers.

"Very few people in this country have any idea of the extent of the co-partnership housing movement in England," said Henry Vivian, M. P., chairman of the business federation known as the Co-Partnership Tenants Ltd. "In 1908 there were in England and Wales 1633 co-operative societies for building purposes with capital, including shares, loans and deposits of $7,000,000 pounds sterling. Since then the movement has progressed rapidly and at present we are spending at the rate of $5,000,000 in the construction of new buildings. We employ over 1000 carpenters.

"Then the great co-operative societies engaged in distributive businesses have spent considerably over $30,000,000 on housing. About $35,000,000 of this amount has been advanced to members on very much the same system as that adopted by the building society movement, and the business has developed in building houses, the ownership of which has been retained by the Co-Operative Distributive Society, but let to members at the usual rates, any profit goes to swell the general profit of the society and thus adding to the dividends on members' purchases. The great friendly societies established for the purpose of insuring their members a weekly payment during sickness also lend large sums chiefly to members to enable them to become on the installment system owners of their own houses. Some of the larger trade unions are also utilizing a portion of their accumulated capital in enabling their members to achieve the same end.

Lost Opportunities. "It is rather surprising that the workers, clerks and men on salary in the cities of this country have not co-operated to establish garden cities in the suburbs. Certainly housing conditions in your cities are bad, and the chance of getting into the country ought to appeal to the people more than it does. Land in the country should be cheap. "One drawback exists here, private corporations control the tramways, and they do not extend their lines, unless assured of immediate and often excessive profits. Municipalities can afford to extend their tramways into the suburbs at a loss, and recoup themselves in the improved stannia of the people. They can dovetail their tram policy into their housing policy, and though they may not show much ledger profit on either, they may still be doing good business, since they realize social values which may not have any exchange values. "The various Buildings Loan societies which enable the workers to secure homes on the installment plan do not fill the bill. It is often risky as well as expensive for workmen to try and buy the houses they live in on the individualistic plan. One plot of land will cost more in proportion than 50 or 100 plots. The legal expenses, the survey fees, and possibly the building of the house, will cost more in proportion. The interest and legal charges in connection with the borrowing of the capital necessary to build are also proportionately heavy. Everything is done on a retail basis, and this involves retail prices. The Individual Risk. "There is the risk. Large numbers of the best class of workmen

BRICKLAYERS' WILL PROTEST TO COUNCIL

Union Men Claim That Civic Employees are Being Used as Strike-Breakers—Authorized Not to Pay Fine.

There were no new developments yesterday in connection with the difficulty between the Hassam Company and the Bricklayers' Union. The Bricklayers say Mr. Low has engaged civic employees to take the place of the two men called out on strike, and they intend to ask the Trades and Labor Council to protest to the city council against allowing civic employees to be used as strike breakers.

A special meeting of the Union will be held this evening to consider the situation. The officials of the Union say the question at issue is a matter of principle vital to the existence of trade unionism. If they allowed Mr. Low's men to violate the working conditions without protest, or without special permission of the Union, they would establish a precedent that would allow other contractors to make their long struggle for shorter hours of no avail.

In support of the contention that the local Union had no jurisdiction over the cement layers employed by the Hassam Company the following telegrams were exhibited yesterday. One is from the two men to their Union in Boston and the other a reply thereto. The messages follow:—

October 26, 1910. E. J. McGivern, Business Agent, Boston Plasterers' Union, No. 10, 3 Mulvey street, Mattapan, Mass.

Bricklayers' Union here have notified us fine of $25, imposed for working after 5. Impossible stop. Have to finish cement sidewalk before leaving. If we wait until between 5 and 6 it is too hard to work. Understand trouble being caused through other contractors using this Union as catspaw. Will reply what we are to do. We are receiving double time after 5 from contractors and are satisfied with their treatment so far.

WILLIAM KIRKLAND, JACK DILLON, The reply to this wire is as follows:—

October 26, 1910. William Kirkland, St. John. Bricklayers have no jurisdiction over cement walks. Keep to work.

E. J. McGIVERN. The Union's Reply.

The following communication was received last evening from the president of the Bricklayers' Union:— To the Editor of The Standard:— Sir:—In reply to the statement in last evening's paper that local contractors were using jurisdiction of the Bricklayers' Union as a catspaw, I say no contractors have ever attempted to use our Union for their personal purposes. The Union is not trying to impose a fine upon the Hassam Company, but upon two of its employees over whom the local Union has jurisdiction in regard to working conditions. The alleged ruling of the business agent of the Boston Union, who probably does not understand that Bricklayers, Masons and Plasterers are all in the headquarters has advised us that we have jurisdiction over these men. Excavators don't generally use plastering tools for blasting rock, and plastering tools are being also used by plasterers on the German street sidewalks. The two men will have to pay the fine when they return to their own Union, if they don't do it here. The Hassam Company may be able to do what it pleases with Unions in other cities, but it can't run everybody in this town.

JAMES MCGIRR, President of the Bricklayers' Union.

SONS OF TEMPEANCE AID CAMPBELLTON

Substantial Grant Passed at the Final Meeting Held in Ludlow Street Baptist Church Last Evening.

The Grand Division of the Sons of Temperance closed its sessions here last evening. A grant was selected as the meeting place of the next annual convention in October, 1911, but the grand officers will select the place for the next semi-annual convention. A business meeting was held yesterday afternoon, at which officers were installed and several reports received and dealt with. A delegation from the St. John Temperance Federation, and another from the I. O. G. T. appeared and presented greetings on behalf of their organizations. G. W. F. Hennigar made a suitable response. In the evening a public meeting was held in the Ludlow street Baptist church. The Grand Worthy Patriarch occupied the chair and addresses were given by Rev. Chas. Plomington, of Petticoe, and Rev. R. A. Stavort, of Harcourt. Appropriate music was furnished by the church choir. The meeting was brought to a close by singing the Doxology.

After the addresses the Grand Division was re-convened and a substantial sum of money was granted to the Division of the Sons of Temperance at Campbellton.

have no certainty of permanent employment, which often means that after they have bought or partly bought a house by a comparatively expensive method, they are burdened with the expense of finding a tenant for it, and collecting the rent, or else must sell at less than cost. "In the co-partnership system we believe we have found the right principle to work on. In these societies the capital is raised in shares of 1 to 10 pounds each, but no person may hold more than 200 pounds in shares. The society builds houses on the wholesale plan, and secures the advantage of wholesale prices. When a tenant wants to move the society will purchase his shares, if he wants to get rid of them. The community is thus able to prevent the intrusion of undesirable residents.
