Do you think UNB students are aware of social issues?

Photos: Nusin Brown
Interviews: Valerie White

1. "No, because of the responses in previous 'Viewpoints.'"

Sue Coster

2. "No, because of lack of genuine concern."

BA III.5

Manuel Skoulas

BA III

3. "Yes. When discussing issues with students, I feel that they are conscious of what's going on."

Terry Thorne

Interviewer

4. "No, because most students don't read enough."

Susan Hodgson

BA II

5. "Yes. They hear about it in class or they read about it in the papers."

Tammi Richardson

BSc IV

6. "Yes, because the Mexican earthquake is a conversational topic."

Darryl Tracy

BSc I

7. "Probably people are aware to a certain extent, but they don't realize the seriousness of some situations."

Jerry Gibb

Phys Ed Grad

8. "Social diseases, but not social issues."

Rob Szo

BA III

9. "People like to think they are, but they generally don't do anything about it."

France Haché

BA IV

10. "I don't think they're half as aware as they should be. People don't seem to want to get involved."

Chrissie van Driest
