"I see by the press a few days ago, said a well-known citizen yesterday, "that the dealers are saying coal is scarce and if we are able to get it at all it will be an outlandish price. Well, if you or some other citizens would take a walk around any of the dea ers' coal sheds at the G. T. R., C. P.R or L. E. & D. R. R., you would seethem all almost full. I think it is just a scheme to make us pay a big price.

VEGETARIAN ATHLETES. gument That Meat in Mederation Can not Be Harmful-A Pies tor a Mixed Diet,

The London Chronicle says: A correspondent draws attention to the fact that in a recent walking match from Dresden to Berlin, 1244 English miles, the first six competitors to arrive were vegetarians. The winner, Karl Mann, did the distance in 26 hours and 62 minutes. The writer proceeds to argue that the use of sh food begets excess of uric acid, which, he thinks, interferes with muscular action. One swallow, however, does not make a summer, and if our correspondent desires to prove his case he will require to select an equal number of healthy men, mixed feeders, and compare their work as athletes or pedestrians with that of vegetarian competitors. Weston, whose feats were certainly far more arwous than those of the German walkers, fed on a mixed diet, and Sandow's food is also of a mixed character. To say that a moderate allowance of meat will induce an ex-cess of uric acid is an unwarrantable supposition. Over-indulgence in flesh foods everybody admits is fraught with disturbances of health, but an utter lack of meat would prove just as disastrous to many individuals. Vegetarians never appear to be able to recognize that one system of diet can never be regarded as suitable for Vegetarians themselves everybody. are not agreed as to the "perfect way" in food. Some consume eggs, milk, and cheese; others reject starch and cultivate vitality on nuts, It is the exercise of an intelligent appre ciation of the foods which best suit usithat lies at the root of successful

DISINFECTING STABLES. After Period of Constant Use This Should Be the Practise.

Of special interest to dairy and stock men generally is the following reminder, recently issued by Dr. A. W. Bitting, Veterinarian of Indiana Agricultural Experiment Station: The disinfection of stables after a period of constant use should be a part of routine practice. Dairy stables in particular should be disinfected twize a year, and oftener if the conditions demand it. It is not possible to give many stables that thorough disinfection that is possible in houses, because their construction will not admit of it, but it is pos sible to do very much and at little expense. The ideal method of disin-fection is by means of a gas, as that would have the power to pene trate everywhere. The effectiveness of this method depends upon securing a large volume of gas and maintaining it for some time. Unless the stable can be made tight, a gas will be of little use. For all practical purposes the gas produced by burning sulphur over a pot of coals is the best if used in connection with steam. The dry sulphur fumes have little germ-killing power, but when combined with the steam in the air it forms a compound that is deadly.
The boiling of water and burning of sulphur should go together. Formal-dehyde gas is not so efficient for stable disinfection as many would have us believe. A very practical means of disinfection that may be used under almost every stable condition is by whitewashing. This is not expensive for material and is very easily applied by means of an inexpensive fruit spray pump. The lime should be thoroughly slacked and strained through cloth and made just thin enough to work well through the nozzle. One man can apply two coats of whitewash with contact. It has the effect, too, of making the barn lighter and cleaner.

After the first spraying, one applica-tion will usually be sufficient if given regularly. As the business of supplying milk to cities and cream-eries is of large proportions and de-

No doubt because of the grandeur the thunderstorm, the flashes of lightning and the loud oise of the thunder, the large majority of the human race is timid and nervous and stands in fear of lightning. Notwithstanding the common belief that lightning is very dangerous, the total number of per-sons killed in a given summer in this country is extremely small in comparison with the population. The number also varies largely from year to year, the last year having witsed an unusual number of deaths from this cause. The general average seems to be about one death to 200,000 of the population each sum mer from lightning. Thousands of people struck by lightning have been allowed to die for lack of attention. The rule is that artifical respiration should be brought about at once. clothes should be loosened and well-known movements of the arms and chest made to bring about, natural breathing. — Electrical Re-
