

GLEANINGS.

COLORADO whiskey is reinforced with a tincture of oak and butternut. The effect is said to be electric.

THERE is a painful rumor that one of the surveying parties on the Pacific railroad has perished in some fires in the woods.

At a printers' festival the following sentiment was proposed: "Woman, second only to the Press in the dissemination of news."

Two colored men of Philadelphia practised on each other's countenances with razors, without using lather, and one was terribly gashed.

The favorite hymn of New Orleans colored churches has the touching refrain, "I'm going to Heaven in a ham basket." They evidently intend to make suitable "provision" for their future happiness.

Is giving some suggestions about butter-making, the "American Agriculturist" says: "Never let your milk stand unnecessarily in any dairy vessel, and never let anything stand in a wooden churn—except sunshine and fresh air."

OAT-MEAL is a valuable article of diet. It contains a great deal of phosphorus, and almost twice as much gluten and three times as much fat as fine wheat flour. It makes children healthy and well nourished, and men and women strong, muscular, able to do much work, and to support great fatigue.

Boston has taken a stand against insult and imposition. The other day a Bostonian was roughly accosted in the street by a stranger with: "Here, I want to go to the Tremont House."

The deliberate reply was, "Well, you can go, if you won't be gone long."

A "new theory of the cause of consumption" has just been advanced by a physician of Belfast, Ireland. The general idea is that tubercular deposits are the inevitable result of insubstantial nourishment, imperfect respiratory function, and re-breathed air. This theory is supported by analysis and facts. The medical profession consider the matter worthy of thorough investigation. If the theory be sound, consumption may always be prevented, and often cured.

The "how to do it" of the Western pioneer is illustrated in the life and adventures of Eli Stillson, of Oshkosh, Wisconsin, who "marched into the bowels of the land" twenty-four years ago with $2000, and started a little farm in a wilderness. He now has 1100 acres of as fine land as the eye can rest upon, worth $100,000. His house is small and neat; but his barn—bless you! it is 600 feet long, and he keeps adding to it. He runs 1500 sheep, and cows, and oxen innumerable; and is allowed to be about the best farmer in Wisconsin.

Some of the English journals have taken advantage of the recent excitement concerning the increased expenditures of royalty, and the popular annoyance at the seclusion of the Queen, to urge the propriety of an abdication in favor of the Prince of Wales. It is believed that the retirement in which Queen Victoria lives is in a great measure rendered imperative by her health. The nervous difficulties from which she suffers might easily assume a serious character under the constant excitement of more public life. Considering hereditary predispositions, her physicians are undoubtedly wise in recommending a quiet life and frequent change of air.

THERE is a story of a woman bold who took extraordinary measures to produce extraordinary results. She and her mother—perhaps not better—half were recruiting amidst Long Branch scenes and surf. This has been paid nightly visits to a certain fashionable gambling saloon; the wife, anxious and troubled, knew by experience that certain lectures were useless. She adopted a more effective means of reform. Attending herself in her husband's best broadcloth and tightest pair of dress boots, this "woman who dared" followed her dissipated lord to his evening haunt, and when he was anxiously awaiting the turn of the cards after coppering the ace, blew a cloud of smoke from the table into his face to attract his attention, and calmly put ten dollars on the king. The story concludes with the rapid and terrified exit of the husband, followed by his successful wife, and the extraction of a promise on the way home, of future abstinence from the green table.
