But is it not a fact that the farmers who reside in York and neighboring counties, those who make this city their market, are loud in their condemnation of the tariff almost as a whole; do not their property, their votes and interests far surpass in value and importance those of the men called to the feast? Is it because there is danger that the farmers will see through the scheme and become violent opponents of the honorable gentleman or because they are not of sufficient importance in the eyes of hon. Mr. Foster that they have not received an invitation to be present?

Mr. Foster, coming as the finance minister of the dominion, will be accorded a hearty welcome here whether his views suit the people or not, but this talk of tariff adjustment by himself and his government has become an old chestnut to the intelligent people of York who have read and heard it discussed for the past thirteen years and still find the same old policy of protection existing in full force

A despatch to Hugh Edgar, St. Marys, on Saturday evening last contained the sad intelligence that his brother John was murdered at Danforth, Maine. The news soon spread among the relatives and friends of deceased, but not until Monday could any of the facts connected with the killing be learned. The murder, which was a most brutal one, took place in the stable connected with a hotel owned by William Foss at Danforth, the murderer

Edgar had worked in the woods in this neighborhood for the past year, generally as cook. As soon as he had finished work it had been customary for him to come to town and blow in his earnings. He had the reputation of being a peaceful fellow, except when he was drinking and things did not go to suit him. When he had not, his temper was not slow in rising. He had been around town three or four days drinking quite hard, and Saturday night he was determined to have it out with Noyes, and followed him around all day threatening to pound him. Edgar Demmons says that he was with Edgar nearly all day, and that Noyes sold Edgar liquor in the morning, but after the latter got what Noyes considered enough for him he refused to sell him more. This maddened Edgar, who threatened to lick him. About 5 o'clock Demmons saw Edgar go to the barn. Following him a short time later he

July 17 .- Many farmers watched St. Swithen's day with an anxious eye. Early this morning the rattle of the mowing machine and the ringing of the hand scythe were heard in all directions, which indicated that having had commenced in earnest. A few commenced last week. Many of the farmers thought that the hay would be a very light crop, but still in many places, though not as good as last year's crop, it will be an average crop. The other crops in this section of the county are doing splendidly. The pulpit of the congregational church was occupied last Sunday by D. Coburn, a student from Princetown college. July 17 .- Many farmers in this vicinity are beginning to cut hay. It is a very poor crop this year. Crops of all kinds are doing remarkably well. A festival was held at this place on Sat-
