O'Brien's (M.P.) farm in them can be traced to a source sufficiently the township of Oro. It was about 5 o'clock, authentic to warrant refutation. What gives color to the belief that the general the throttle and on drawing near a cattlegives color to the belief that the general government of Mexico apprehends danger is the fact that troops are being massed on the frontier. It will be remembered that it was on this frontier that the revolution had birth that made Diaz president of Mexico. The Diaz government is, however, strong enough to nip in the bud any revolution. Charges have been made against some three or more men under the United States neutrality law, and warrants for their arrest are now in the and warrants for their arrest are now in the creature just at the waist and cut the body hands of United States officials. It is most clean in halves, one portion being thrown reasonable to suppose that there are to be some very sensational developments here in a few days that will assume an international the train ran several lengths beyond before character, and the Diaz govenment, while she was brought to a standstill. it has nothing to fear, is only acting to pre-

The train hands were dispatched in variought also to make their tenure of office for dust directions, and several farmers were no-life. There is no doubt that the law has tifled of the horror. About 300 yards up the occasioned considerable unrest in Mexico. The organizers of the outbreak are said to the poor girl lived with her grandfather and make their headquarters in Lared, and grandmother, Mr. and Mrs. James Fraser. agents of the American Government, so it is said, have been here for several days securing the names of the men.

To-night I learned that warrants have others. Deputy United States Marshal Yglesias has the papers for their arrests, and knowing full well that he has not a force sufficient to arrest them, has asked for troop from Fort McIntosh. The fugitives are said to be stationed about 50 miles above here. Deputy Yglesias left Fort McIntosh at 11 o'clock to-night for the point which scouts indicate as the rendezvous of the revolutionists, with a sufficient force of United States soldiers to kill or capture them. At the same time a force of Mexican soldiers left the fort in New Leredo to intercept the revolutionists should they attempt to escape across the Rio Grande. The penalty for the violation of the revolutionary act of the United States criminal code is $1000 fine and three to seven years in penitentiary.

San Antonio, Tex., June 25.—Senor Felipe Gonzalis, a wealthy merchant and rancher of Tamico, Mexico, has arrived here from the scene of the alleged revolutionary operations in Mexico. According to Gonzalis the alleged revolution is nothing more or less than a bold attempt of an organized gang of than a triangle to commit robbery. Gonzalis says that last Friday the bandits, under the leadership of an ex-officer of the Mexican army, attacked a train near Monterey bearing all. attacked a train near Monterey bearing gold and silver bullion to the United States. The train was well guarded by a detachment of soldiers and a pitched battle resulted, in which several of the bandits were killed and their leader captured and shot. The bandits, Gonzalis declares, were Mexican refugees who crossed from the Texas side of the river near Laredo. Notwithstanding this state ment it is the general belief here that a revolutionary movement of no inconsiderable im-possessed a single political feature. The only move the Government has made is to mass troops'in Nuevo Laredo to head off Mexican malcontents, who, with more bluster than sense, have threatened to invade Mexican soil from Texas.

The poor old lady was induced not to go near the fatal cattle-guard. Conductor Waterhouse ran his train down to where the grandfather was at work and brought the old gentleman up.

Mrs. Fraser said her granddaughter would have been 16 in a few months. Her name was Lizzie and she had raised her, her father and mother being dead. Between her sobs the poor old lady said, "her Lizzie was such a fine girl." The grandmother then went on to explain, still bitterly sobbing, that Lizzie had gone down to the tracks to keep the cattle off and to look for strawberries. She could not form the faintest idea of why she had got down into the cattle-guard, the bottom of which was totally void of grass or any kind of vegetation. There were several marks of Lizzie's bare feet in the soft clay of the bottom of the guard, however.
