Bonar Law, the new leader of the British Unionists, repeats the belief that Canadians rejected the reciprosity agreement through fear that their national spirit and attachment to the Old Land could not withstand the strain of freer commercial relations with the United States. From the welcome they extend them some Canadians seem to think assertions of this kind are compliments. At a meeting specially called o discuss municipal matters, members or the board of trade came to the conclusion that the city charter is a good one and that we would have het-ter city government if its provisions were lived up to by the city council. It would make for the accomplishment of that end if more members of the board of trade were willing to serve the city as aldermen. Harry Thaw, who a few years ago persuaded the United States cour's that he was too crazy to be hanged, is now trying to persuade them that he is not crazy enough to be kept in an asylum.
