The Huns Torpedo the Lusitania.

The worst outrage perpetrated by the German pirates is the torpedoing of the Lusitania, one of the largest Cunard liners, which ran between New York and Liverpool. The outrage cannot be attributed to the indiscretion or over-zealousness of those commanding the submarines engaged in the outrage. The evidence which existed before the Lusitania left New York affords conclusive proof that the action was contemplated, designed and intended before the Lusitania sailed, and that the plans had been arranged by the German Emperor and Admiralty before that time. An advertisement was placed in American newspapers, signed by the German Embassy at Washington, stating that it was the intention of the German Admiralty to sink the Lusitania on this trip to Liverpool and warning Americans not to take passage on her. This advertisement was in itself a defiance of the policy outlined by the American Government, which had warned Germany last February that the United States would hold Germany to strict accountability if in carrying out her inhuman, immoral and illegal campaign of sinking merchantmen, American lives were lost. So we know, the American Government took no action after the advertisement of the German Embassy appeared last week, and some 200 Americans sailed among the 1,356 passengers and 810 crew, and only 51 were saved.

The loss of the Lusitania, with nearly 1,600 lives so far unaccounted for will change the situation at sea very materially so far as passenger traffic is concerned, and it will force the British Admiralty to make even greater efforts to guard against the submarine peril. The loss of American lives will stir up American public opinion against the American Government to take action to cope with the defiance of the declared policy of the United States. We can hardly conceive that it is possible that the American people will take this defiance and murder of Americans lying down. They will force their Government to take action, and the only action that is commensurate with the peril is war. America can aid very materially by bringing her navy into action, and an effort to clear the seas of the German submarine menace. Among the saved we are pleased to find Mr. Charles T. Bowring, brother of Mr. Eric Bowring, who received a cable last evening, advising him of his safety. Mr. Charles T. Bowring is head of the New York firm of Bowring Bros., and was on his way on board the Lusitania to attend a general meeting of the firm at Liverpool.

St. Bon's Association.

At a meeting of the Council of the Alumni of St. Bonaventure's College held recently, arrangements were made for a reception to His Grace the Archbishop-Elect and his distinguished guests on the morning after the consecration. The Archbishop will celebrate his first Arch-Episcopal mass in the Oratory of St. Bonaventure's. He will be attended by two distinguished chaplains, and the servers will be two of the College Alumni. His Excellency Monsignor Signat will be the celebrant at the Benediction after mass and will also impart the Papal blessing. Breakfast will be served at the College after Benediction, and the gathering promises to be one of the most memorable yet held within the walls of Old St. Bon's.

FLAMELESS AIRSHIP GUNS.
Airships equipped with machine-guns run a certain degree of risk from an explosion caused by the flame at the muzzle of the gun. Hence considerable study has been devoted to obviating this danger. This has now been accomplished by a young Florentine chemist named Guido Foa. He is said to have recently given a demonstration before an Italian military commission of a new powder invented by him which burns without either flame or smoke and does not flare up on detonation. While specially useful for the guns of aircraft it will be of value in artillery and infantry engagements from the fact that it will not betray the firing-line to the enemy.

Await Enquiry Before Taking Action for Murder of Americans on Lusitania.

10.00 A.M.

1.00 P. M.

WASHINGTON, To-day. The destruction of the British Liner Lusitania, with the loss of many lives, has shocked the officials of the United States Government and spread a profound grief in the National capital. Although it was not known how many, if any of these lost were Americans, the view was general that the most serious situation has been created by that has confronted the American Government since the outbreak of the war in Europe. The warning of the United States that Germany would be held to strict accountability for the loss of American lives, irrespective whether they were aboard belligerent or neutral vessels when attacked, has focussed attention on the White House, where President Wilson, until late in the night, read despatches with grave interest. The President made no comment. Secretary Bryan, Counsellor Lansing and Senators and members of the House, who were in the city, waited up until a late hour for definite news of the passengers and crew of the ill-fated ship. The officials said the facts and circumstances would have to be obtained by careful investigation during the next few days, before any announcements could be made by the American Government. The disposition among high officials was not to take hasty action, but to await the British Admiralty's reports of the results and the investigations of Ambassador Page. Although Congress is not in session, Chairman Stone, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee and other members of the Committee are now in the city. It is expected they will be consulted by President Wilson before he decides on the policy to be pursued by the United States.

ROOSEVELT WANTS WAR.
ST. FRANCISCO, To-day. Roosevelt, after learning the details of the sinking of the Lusitania, made this statement. This represents not merely piracy, but piracy on a vast scale of murder than any old time pirate ever practised. This is the warfare which destroyed Lovain and Dinant and hundreds of men, women and children in Belgium. It is warfare against innocent men, women and children travelling on the ocean, and to our own fellow countrymen and countrywomen who are among the sufferers. It seems inconceivable that we can refrain from taking action in this matter, for we owe it not only to humanity but to our own national self-respect.

SIX HUNDRED AND THIRTY-FOUR SAVED OUT OF TWO THOUSAND ONE HUNDRED AND NINETY-EIGHT—FIFTY-ONE AMERICANS SAVED ONLY.
WASHINGTON, To-day. A despatch received by the State Department early from Consul Lauriat at Queenstown put the number of rescued of all nationalities from the Lusitania disaster at 634. The Consul's latest message added the names of four Americans saved to those mentioned in his previous despatch, making a total of 51 Americans saved. Few others were rescued, he said, but several unidentified bodies had been recovered.

AMERICAN DENUNCIATION STRONG—GERMAN-AMERICANS JUSTIFY THE WHOLESAL MURDER.
NEW YORK, To-day. General denunciation of the sinking of the Lusitania appears in the newspapers in the United States. The act is repeatedly stamped as piracy, of a great nation running amuck and calling it military necessity. A phrase in the editorial of the New York World typifies the majority of comments that the effects upon the public opinion in this country will be more than a counteract the success of the undertaking, is asserted by most of these newspapers. German newspapers justify the deed and declare that the passengers were given fair warning by the German Embassy in widely circulated advertisements published just before the liner sailed. They regret the loss but they say that Germany is fighting for her existence, that Great Britain for her existence.

Four Hours in Water Before Rescue.

Mr. Eric Bowring received another message from his mother stating that his brother Charles had jumped overboard from the Lusitania and was in the water for four hours before he was rescued. The message stated also that but few cabin passengers were saved.

The Price.

Cheers for the gallant dead:—
Throated full-voiced across the guarded seas—
Unto the farthest rim of the wide Bond,
Re-echoing back to the red, stricken field
Where faded the maple-crowned, elder-born.
To stand embattled with the Brother-hood
For all that men hold of the highest worth—
Against that which all who are men contend,
Hazarding valour to the supreme test
And gaining sweetest praise to those who strive—
Brother, well done!

Toll for the honored dead:—
Who parted from us these short moons ago—
All debonair, vibrant with life and song,
And consecration to their high enterprise—
Nor recked that Life were price too high to pay
That we and all the world might live in peace.
'Neath altars skies they lie in stranger grove earth—
But from that hallowed ground there yet shall spring
Rare flowers of healing for the world's unease.
Ye gallant souls! whom foolish men call dead,
Ye have but passed the portal into Life
By that swift going we would envy thee,
Leaving a name and chastened memory
As inspiration from those dauntless ones
Who nobly fall.

Who on that coming "day":—
When pinioned treachery and murder stand
Confronting not the baleful eye of "that"
But that of calm and even Justice bent
In stern reproval of an awful deed
And balanced weighing of the evidence
Writ with a brother's blood by culprit hand
Witnessed and signed in attention plain
That may not be denied as valueless,
Or brushed aside as but a "paper" jest.
Nor shall the plea of "dire necessity"
Now pretentious false of "self-defence"
Aval when that dread Court shall judgment give
In condemnation of the criminal.
To pay the price.

The Threat by the German Embassy

AT WASHINGTON. Prior to the sailing of the Lusitania from New York the German Embassy at Washington published a statement in the New York newspapers, announcing that German submarines intended to torpedo the Lusitania. Mr. Alfred G. Vanderbilt also received an anonymous telegram warning him specially. We append a cutting from the New York Times of May 2nd, telling what some prominent passengers thought of the threat.
"Charles T. Bowring, head of the firm of Bowring Bros., and President of the St. George's Society, who was a passenger, said that it was a silly performance for the German Embassy to do, and below the dignity of a diplomatic representative of any foreign government.
"Alexander Campbell, general manager for John Dewar & Sons, London, who was returning home after transferring his firm's business in this country to an agency, said: 'I think it is a lot of tommy rot for any Government to do such a thing, and it is hard to believe that the German Ambassador dictated the advertisement. The Lusitania can run away from any submarine the Germans have got, and the British Admiralty will see that she is looked after when she arrives in striking distance of the Irish coast.'
"D. A. Thomas, the wealthy Welsh coal operator, who sailed on the Lusitania, accompanied by his daughter, Lady Mackworth, the English mili-ant suffragette, said he was not worrying about the ship being attacked by submarines.

"Charles Klein, the American playwright, told a Times reporter, who asked him about the warning in the newspapers, that he was going to devote his time on the voyage to thinking of his new play, 'Polish & Peril', and would not have time to worry about trifles.
"Elihu Hubbard, the publisher of The Philistine, who sailed for Liverpool on the Lusitania with his wife, said he believed the German Emperor had ordered the advertisement to be placed in the newspapers and added socrally, that if he was on board the liner when she was torpedoed, she would be able to do the Kaiser justice in The Philistine.
"Alfred G. Vanderbilt, who was one of the last to go on board, said he was going over to spend three weeks in London to see his stable and look over some property he had there."

Some of the new sleeves are long, close and slightly puffed at the shoulder, recalling medieval fashions.

Household Notes.

Children's garments are made of pongee; also, the useful frock for women is seen in pongee of different colors.
There are handbags for the sports hat of knitted elastic, that stretch while slipping and tighten up when in place.
Scalloped and piped edges on skirts and jackets have much to do with the charm of the present fashions.
Morning dresses are made of gingham, linen or percale. They are fashioned to wear with separate gimpes of plain white handkerchief linen.
