Premier Asquith's Spirited Speech.

It is gratifying to find Prime Minister Asquith in his place in the House of Commons once more, and particularly to hear from him a plain statement of the situation. He is gifted with cogent and plain speech, and with these qualities, his standing and the situation itself call for attention to his weighty utterance. In spite of casualties amounting to 377,000, General French had almost a million men under his command. The story of the Navy was most inspiring as was his review of the grand rally from the Overseas dominions. The dominant note of the speech was the grim determination to carry the war to a successful conclusion. He had full faith in the voluntary response to recruiting, but rather than not win, he would not hesitate to have recourse to conscription. He told the country plainly that people must be prepared to make far greater financial sacrifices than they had done in the past, and that so long as he had health and strength and the confidence of King and people, he would not lay down the burden placed on him. The speech had the right ring about it. It voiced the grim but dog determination of the people to win out, and its spirit will strike a chord of like grimness and determination throughout the length and breadth of the Empire.

Robert Templeton.

LIEUT.-COLONEL OTWAY.

Lieut. Colonel and Mrs. Otway, who succeeds Brigadier and Mrs. Morehen in command of the S. A. forces in Newfoundland, arrived in the City last Saturday. Both the Colonel and his wife are Officers of long standing, having connected themselves with the organization some thirty two years ago, when to be a Salvationist was not so popular as it is to-day. Their years of service have not been confined to one branch of the Army's work, but having earned for themselves the reputation of being clever and capable administrators, they very soon rose in the service until they ranked among the leading officers in the Old Country. They have filled many important commands, such as Provincial Officers for Ireland, Midlands and Wales. They also spent a few years in connection with the Army's young people's work, and have been for years the national young people's secretary.

The Colonel has latterly been the Divisional Officer for Hull and Lincoln, and has many stirring stories to tell of wartime conditions there. Scargory is in that Division, and the day after its bombardment by the German fleet, he visited the town to see what could be done in the way of affording relief and consolation to the stricken people. One very pathetic case was that of a man and his wife who had been converted only two weeks previous in a meeting conducted by The General. They had just bought their own little home. On the morning of the bombardment, they were sitting at breakfast when the noise made them rush to the door. No sooner had they left the dining-room than a shell burst through and utterly wrecked the house, burying the man's mother who had remained indoors under a mass of debris. The Colonel also tells a story of two news-boys who were crouching beside a house to avoid the shells. A gentleman who was in the cellar with his family, invited them to come in. They gladly accepted the invitation, and were no sooner inside than they fell on their knees and commenced to pray. "These boys put us to shame," said the gentleman. "We have never yet thought of praying. Let us all kneel down, and the lady will pray aloud." The Colonel has also vivid recollections of the visit of a Zeppelin to Hull, when sixty people were killed, and some ninety injured. The war, has not, by any means halted the efforts of The Army in the Old Country, he says, though it has turned our energies in other directions. Special efforts, for instance, are being made to get the military men saved. At Hull II, some two hundred have, professed conversion. Many Corps have adopted the plan of giving the boys in khaki who attend the meetings the front seats and getting them to sing together, whether saved or unsaved. This is a means of attracting others. The reading of letters from the trenches is also a feature of many Army services in Britain now. The installation meeting will take place on Friday, November 5th, in S. A. Hall, New Gower Street. Lieut. Colonel Smeeton, of Toronto, will be present to introduce the Colonel. The local Salvationists are looking forward to a very successful meeting, and extend a hearty welcome to all.

McMurdo's Store News

WEDNESDAY, Nov. 3, '15.
We should like you to see our display of Willard's Chocolates just now. We believe it is as good a show as any we have ever been able to to please our friends and customers, and their friends. For Willard's Forkdip Chocolates have proven a very satisfactory line for all concerned; for our customers, because we have enabled them to choose for their friends a package that looks elegant and has a first-class reputation; for the recipients of these packages for the pleasure they receive in the partaking of these most delicious sweetmeats; for ourselves for the satisfaction of knowing that the others mentioned are completely satisfied. And the more of these Chocolates we sell the more we realize what a bold Willard's Forkdip have upon the public, as we find it increasingly easy to sell them. If you have not yet tried Willard's, come and have a look at our stock. Prices from 45c. to $2.75 a box.

Boy Killed

Magistrate Way sends the following message to the Department of Justice:—

"A boy named Jonas Bob Betta, aged 9 years, was accidentally killed at Morrisville, Conn. River, on the 20th ult. by a pile of plank falling on him. When the lumber was removed he only lived a few minutes."

Shooting Accident

A message was received in the city to-day stating that Alfred Lane, of Gambo, had his arm blown off yesterday afternoon, presumably by the explosion of a gun. No particulars as to how the accident occurred have yet been received, but the message states that an unfortunate man has been taken to Grand Falls to be attended by Dr. Chamberlain.

Household Notes.

You can clean a white felt hat by mixing a little magnesia to a paste with cold water. The mixture should be brushed on to the hat very evenly and left to dry. Then brush off with a clean stiff brush.

The best method of cleaning colored embroidery at home is to use stale bread. Rub the surface lightly, in order to avoid spoiling the work; use a fresh piece of bread as soon as the other becomes soiled.

Good living is as much a case of careful planning as it is of spending money. Think before you buy, and do not put off planning a meal until almost meal time. Haste in this, as in anything else, means waste.

Instead of melting butter when you want to mix it with sugar, place the butter in a double boiler and allow it to get warm. It will then beat up very easily with the sugar, and will not cause the cake to be heavy.

AN EXTRA HOUR.—Realizing the benefit that Prohibition will mean to the working man, and to business generally, some of our city firms have decided to close their premises for one hour to-morrow, or give their employees extra time at meals to enable them to vote. We trust that every firm will grant this facility.

Save the paraffin from jelly; have an old coffee pot for the purpose and keep all old paraffin in it. When you want to cover the jelly again put the pot on the stove, heat the paraffin, and it will be convenient to pour it from the spout.

Never scrape an enameled saucepan with a knife, or you will chip the enamel; use a saucepan brush. When the saucepan becomes burnt remove all traces of food, and then rub the blackened parts with a damp piece of emery cloth.
