Madapollam, Longcloth, Sheeting, Pillow Cotton and Tea Towelling IN COTTON SALE NEXT WEEK

Direct from the mills in Manchester, England. English Cottons on close inspection will impress you with the evenness of the thread and perfection in weave, and suggest that a special process of manufacture has been operated to accomplish such results. But such cottons, we find, are only obtained by the mills where the most improved machinery is installed; by the manufacturer who keeps his plant equipped with the most modern improved machines for improving the weave, as well as labor-saving devices. You will also find, if you could visit the different mills in Manchester and elsewhere, that the manufacturer who continues to produce his output from the same machines and process used 25 years ago, is not building any additions to his plant, as his products are being crowded out, and is merely kept alive by orders that cannot be filled elsewhere. This is the reason Manchester mills practically control the cotton markets, and why we import so heavily. They cannot be excelled.
