The Calvary Baptite Sunday school held their annual meeting in the lecture room of the church yesterday evening, Superintendent H. Howell, occupying the chair. After a scripture reading by Rev. T. Baldwin, the Secretary, H. Galbratth, read a carefully prepared report on the general condition of the Sunday school for the year past. This report showed a steady increase in membership and affairs generally in a very prosperone condition. Treasurer J. Robinson then presented the financial statement, showing not only freedom from debt, but a surplus fund on hand. The election of officers was then proceeded with, and the following were chosen for the ensaing term; Superintendent, Dr. E. Hall; assistant superintendent, Dr. E. Hall; assistant superintendent, Dr. E. Hall; assistant superintendent, Or. E. Hall; assistant of the Victoris West mission an action was taken. The meeting then adjourned until next Sanday at 4 p.m., when the reports from the various missions will be read and discussed.

DOWE'S BULLET-PROOF COAT

LONDON, May 27.—At the special test of the bullet-proof coat invented by Herr Dowe, the Manheim tailor, at the Albamhra theatre, among the witnesses were the Duke of Cambridge, commander in chief of the British army; General Sir Frederick

Duke of Cambridge, commander in chief of the British army; General Sir Frederick Roberts, recently commander in chief in India; Major General Sir Bedvere Buller, General Sir H. Evelyn Wood and members of the nobility, and military and naval attaches of foreign embassies and legations. Herr Dowe is short, slightly built and has a black moustache. After reviewing previous experiments the coat or cuirass was produced. It looked like a garment of black cloth about two inches thick. A large screen was placed at the back of the stage, and from the platform ran a staging about ten feet long, which extended into the centre of the theatre.

Captain Martin, the well known rifle shot, stationed himself at the end of this staging and first fired at some logs of wood thirty inches thick, placed on a pedestal in the middle of the stage. The captain used the English and German regulation rifle and the regulation ammunition. It was much commented upon by military officers that the German bullets, in every case, passed through the logs, while in some cases the English bullets remained in the wood. Herr Dowe's cuirass was then placed in front of the logs and a dozen shots were fired at it, but the ballets failed to plerce it, remaining imbedded in the stuff of which it is made. The sheet of white paper which covered the back of the cuirass would have shown had any bullets gone through.

white paper which covered the back of the cuirass would have shown had any bullets gone through.

Captain Martin then fired a few shots from the dress circle of the theatre and the result was the same. A horse was then led up on the stage and Herr Dowe's cuirass laid on its body, after which several shots were fired at it. The horse merely started at the sound of the report, but was not wounded. The cuirass was then placed close to the front of a sheet of glass and several shots fired at it. The glass was not affected by the shots striking the cuirass. A spectator asked that Captain Dutton Hunt be allowed to experiment with his own rifle and Herr Dowe consented. The captain produced his own rifle, loaded it in the presence of witnesses and fired from a distance of six feet. The bullet failed to pierce, the coat.

"One of my children had Cryst. The case was attended by our physician, and was supposed to be well under control. One night I was startled by the child's hard breathing, and on going to it found it strangling. It had nearly ceased to breathe, Realizing that the child's alarming condition had become possible in spite of the medicines given, I reasoned that such remedies would be of no avail. Having part of a bottle of Ayer's Cherry Pectoral in the house, I gave the child three doese, at short intervals, and anxiously waited results. From the moment the Pectoral was given, the child's breathing grew easier, and, in a short time, she was sleeping quietly and breathing naturally. The child is alive and well to-day, and I do not hesitate to say that Ayer's Cherry Pectoral saved her life."
