We're Living In the 'Service Century'

Wireless telegraphy is "old stuff" now. Radio is taken as a matter of fact. Sending pictures through the air is the newest development.

Yet men have been breathing and looking through and living in this same air for thousands of years without guessing all it could be made to do for them. And ever since men have been living together in towns and cities they've had a great variety of needs satisfied-buying needs, selling needs, every sort Yet It has remained for recent years to offer a medium that systematically provides for the immediate satisfaction of these wants of everyday life—a medium presented in The London Free Press' A-B-C Here you find a catalogue of offers, wants and opportunities—drawn from every part of the city and from every angle of interest—and all arranged in 1-2-3
