THE HAY CROP IN MAINE.—Although the season is backward, it is far enough advanced to show that the grass crop in this State is very promising—never more so perhaps. The fall season was wet and the grass cut very thick; the snow covered the ground constantly during the winter, protecting the roots so that they were neither killed nor thrown out by the frost, and the consequence is that there is now the groundwork of a first-rate hay crop.—Portland Advertiser, April 23.
