CANADIAN TEMPERANCE MEDALS.

BY R. W. MCLACHLAN.

Supplement to an article on the same subject published in Vol. VIII.

HOW often, after what was believed to be the whole of a series has been carefully described, and the work laid aside as a task well and thoroughly done, do new varieties turn up and fresh facts come to light. Such work, therefore, in the course of a few years proves to be very imperfect and requires to be supplemented with an additional list or entirely re-written.

This has proved to be the case with an article written by me for the October number of the eighth volume of this journal. In it I gave what I supposed to be a complete and exhaustive list of the Canadian Temperance medals. But since then a number of others have come under my notice, only two of which were struck after the article was
