

- British alliance, 99, 242; and Monroe Doctrine, 119, 365; and Philippines, 166, 346, 363-365; and Chinese trade, 204; United States and Russian War, 222, 223, 347, 348; United States and Chinese War, 330, 345; and China, 340, 367; connection with United States, 341; and the Pacific, 341; Perry's expedition, 341; Harris as minister to, 312; United States and internal disturbances, 343; and Shimonoseki indemnity, 343; and extraterritoriality, 343; American teaching and example, 343; American trade, 344; American interest in conditions and art, 344; protest against annexation of Hawaii, 346; and United States in Far Eastern questions, 346; and "open door," 347, 366; American indifference to political "yellow peril," 347; effect of peace of Portsmouth on American relations, 343, 366; necessary basic change in American relations, 349; present questions with United States, 350; and American and Canadian anti-Japanese agitation, 353-355; and emigration to America, 354; effect of anti-Japanese agitation on American relations, 355; possible American complications due to Latin American emigration, 359-362; attitude towards Hawaii, 362; and Pan-Asianism, 365; future American relations as to Far East, 365-368; abstract questions, "conflict of civilizations," 368; war for "dominion of the Pacific," 369, 370; extent of estrangement with United States, 371; speed necessary if Japan plans to attack, 371; factors working against war, 372, 373. See also Far East, Japanese.
- Japanese, basis of agitation for exclusion, 74-78, 350, 351, 359; emigration to Latin America, 210, 357-362; as laborers in Hawaii, 320; and annexation of Hawaii, 321, 316; commercial honesty, 345; unpopularity on Pacific coast, 350; probable attitude as citizens, 351; American and Japanese governments and anti-Japanese agitation, 352, 353; home opposition to American emigration, 354; opposition to, in British colonies, 354; smuggling of, 355; effect of agitation on American relations with Japan, 355; necessity of emigration, 357; emigration to Korea, 357; to Manchuria, 357; and tropics, 357; and citizenship in Hawaii, 362. See also Japan.
- Jefferson, Thomas, and Louisiana Purchase, 31, 88; and French alliance (1793), 94; policy of isolation, 95; and Cuba, 124; and French Revolution, 186; and Genet, 186; and Alexander I, 214.
- Jews, as immigrants, 51, 218; anti-Semitism in United States, 52; persecution in Russia, 217.
- Kennan, George, articles on Siberia, 217.
- Kentaro, Baron Kaneko, on command of the Pacific, 371 n.
- Kishinev massacre, 220.
- Korea, and peace of Portsmouth, 349; Japanese immigration, 357.
- Kossuth, Louis, visit to United States, 224.
- Kosztla affair, 224.
- Labor, unionism and immigration, 59; and negro problem, 72; and Asiatic immigration, 75, 77, 351; question in Philippines, 160, 162, 171; in Hawaii, 319.
- Ladrones, cession to Germany, 199.
- Lafayette, Marquis de, as American hero, 185.
- Language, and nation, 42, 44; future, in United States, 44-46, 58; and assimilation in Porto Rico, 147; question in Philippines, 169.
- Latin America, fear of Monroe Doctrine, 107; preservation under it, 109-111, 168, 289; Monroe Doctrine and responsibility for conduct, 115-117; Pan-Americanism and congresses, 180, 298-302; and "open door," 183; German-American trade rivalry, 204, 206; and German expansion, 205-211; test of American diplomacy, 281; United States and revolt, 281; later American historical ties, 281-284; and Venezuela boundary incident, 284; and American-Spanish War, 285; and Panama Revolution, 285; and evacuation of Cuba, 285; Cuba as test of capacity for self-government, 286; and reoccupation of Cuba, 288; United States and foreign grievances in, 289-292; Roosevelt on this, 289-291; torts and contractual obligations, 291; San Domingo intervention, 292; political suspicion of United States, 292, 298, 304-306; Venezuela case, 293; problem of pri-