prisoners shall be collected from the stations every morning and kept in the building only as lo may be necessary for trial in Court. Here, also, are the Deputy Chief Constable's room and the of the Police Court clerk, the Staff Inspector's rooms, and two spare offices, besides a fire-proof

THE FIRST FLOOR

The main entrance to the first floor is in the immediate front of the building. It has arranged on different principles to those on which the main side entrances have been constru Instead of opening on the ground floor, it leads by a flight of steps eighty-five feet long to the floor through an arched loggia formed of three heavy enriched and carved arches supported on c clusters of columns. The floor, walls and roof of the loggia will be of cut stone. From the l open three large doorways, the centre one being twelve feet wide, and the one on either side seven wide. These openings will be supplied with handsome oak doors and frames, having bronzed e hinges extending round the doorways several feet each way, and large bronze handles and locks. doorways lead to vestibules which will be connected by arched door openings, and will make vestibule extending the full width of the entrance. These vestibules will have stone floors and walls will be lined with cut stone. The door openings and arches will be ornamented with enr cut stone and band mouldings. The ceiling will be heavily timbered with moulded oak, left ex and highly polished. Out of the vestibule open three large doors of heavy oak frame work, deco with hinge furniture similar to that on the front doors. Next to the vestibule is the entrance t main staircase hall on the first floor in the front part of the building. This entrance will have stone floors and walls and a heavy enriched oak timber ceiling. The side next to the main stai hall, immediately opposite the entrance, will be enclosed with three large cut stone arches finely t and curiched, and supported by clusters of columns with enriched bases and caps. This main ent will have a rich and solid appearance, as well as a pleasing artistic effect.

From this entrance rises a flight of stone steps, about fifty feet long, ascending to the staircase hall, which will be about forty feet wide and one hundred and eighty-five feet long. Imately opposite the entrance rises the grand staircase fifteen feet wide, and turning to the right and to the County or City buildings. As it rises to the second floor the staircase will show its hand design, with its marble treads and landings, enriched, grilled, and scrolled wrought-iron balustr. and brass polished, nickel-plated handrails. The ceiling of the main hall will be elaborately ornam with enriched plaster beams laid out in panels. The walls will be dadoed up from the floor with h panelled and moulded oak dadoing to the height of about seven feet. At intervals of about fifteen will be projecting pilasters from the floor to the underside of the frieze of the cornice, near the co line. These pilasters will be of rich design, with moulded bases and carved caps. The whole wi worked out in Keen's cement. Above the caps of these pilasters there will be a handsomely-more dental cornice, with enriched frieze and architrave mouldings. The ceiling of the main hall wi supported by enriched east-iron columns in keeping with the rest of the work. Leading from main hall are the corridors on either side of the building, to the north and south, and turning t east and west at the northern end. These corridors will be fifteen feet wide, and will be finishe keeping with the main hall. The staircases from the City and County entrances will end on corridors, which will at the point of landing form large halls from which the main staircases fo east and west sides of the building will rise from a width of twelve feet. They will branch off to right and left in ascending to the other floors. Through the well-holes of these staircases the elev will ascend to the different floors as before mentioned. There is also one other main staircase similar description on the north side of the building very conveniently situated in a circular bay jecting into the courtyard. These stairs have been so located for the convenience of Court officials
