TWO MEN UNDER ARREST BELONG, POLICE THINK, TO "MURDER CAR" GANG

Arrests of "Bridgie" Webber and Associate Are Likely to Result in "Sensational Developments" Promised by Commissioner Dougherty—Newsboy Held as Material Witness—Becker is Under Detention.

NEW YORK, July 21.—(Special.)—Second Deputy Police Commissioner Dougherty to-day made a mysterious tour up town in his efforts to solve the Herman Rosenthal murder and bring about the sensational developments which he had said could be expected late to-day.

The deputy commissioner in charge of the detective bureau, had promised that there would be "something doing" this evening and that arrests might be expected.

Louis "Bridgie" Webber, keeper of an uptown resort, and Sam Paul, head of the "Sam Paul Association," at the outset of which last Sunday threats were made to "get" Herman Rosenthal, the gambler, were arrested to-night on suspicion of complicity in connection with the killing of Rosenthal last Monday night.

An important witness of the assassination was found to-day. He is a newsboy who sold Herman Rosenthal his batch of morning newspapers just before the gambler was shot to death in front of the Metropolitan Hotel.

The newsboy is in terror of his life and tells a vague story of the murder, evidently suppressing much that he knows. While the police were looking for him in Saratoga, having learned that a fund had been raised to get the youth out of New York, he has been in New Rochelle since the murder, returning here last night.

The high officials of the police department have ceased to bear the defence of Lieut. Charles Becker, formerly head of the "Strong Arm" squad, and accused by Rosenthal before his murder of having grown wealthy on the tribute exacted from gamblers.

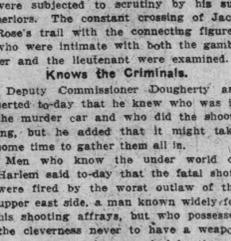

Becker has been relieved of active duty with his fowing commission, and is kept at police headquarters under orders. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty indicated the abandonment of Becker for the first time when, in reply to a question if Becker had been sent out to "Far Rockaway" to bring in Jack Rose last night, replied: "I would no more send out Becker to arrest a man in connection with the Rosenthal murder than I would send out Jack Rose himself. Becker is a figure in the case."

No Charge Against Becker. So far Becker is being detained at police headquarters. No direct charge has been brought against him in connection with Rosenthal's death, and none will be until Commissioner Dougherty has all the facts and makes all the arrests. Then, if the charges warrant it, Becker will be held to answer.

Thrown on his own defence, Lieut. Becker has made a statement in answer to a charge that he had bought an expensive house in the city. He said the cost represented his savings of nineteen years, and those of his wife, as well as a $200 loan from his brother. Becker said he informed Commissioner Waido at the time he made the purchase, saying he supposed it would start a scandal when it was known.

FOUNDER OF PEASE FOUNDRY KILLED HIMSELF AFTER WORRY OVER HEAVY FINANCIAL LOSSES

J. T. Sheridan, After Writing a Lengthy Letter Telling of Business Deals and Loss of the Results of His Life Work, Sat at His Desk in New Toronto and Put Bullet Thru His Brain.

J. T. Sheridan, founder and former president and general manager of the Pease Foundry Company, Toronto, who committed suicide on Saturday.

After setting forth all his financial and business difficulties in a letter, J. T. Sheridan, founder of the Pease Foundry Company, and up till more than a year ago its president, committed suicide about 3.40 Saturday afternoon in the office of the plant at New Toronto. He was found dying five minutes later.

Of late Mr. Sheridan's visits to the plant had been few and far between. On Saturday afternoon about 3 o'clock he walked into the foundry. Although it is not the custom to work after 12 o'clock on this day, six men were inside helping to repair a clutch block run by air. An expert was on hand from the Dodd's Pulley Works to supervise the job.

Mr. Sheridan was smoking a cigar. He shook hands warmly with Chester Beswick, shipper, and George Cooper, under-foreman. These two men had been with the company for years. The late owner talked over old times with the men. Mr. Beswick then unlocked the office door for him, as he wanted to phone.

FOUND BY WORKMEN

Hearing groans about 3.40, Cooper and Beswick opened the office door and entered. Mr. Sheridan was lying on the floor in a crumpled position. His feet were under the arch of the desk, while the chair from which he had fallen was beside him. His right hand, grasping a Savage automatic ten-shot .32 calibre revolver, was under his right knee. Blood was streaming from the mouth and left ear. He was still groaning.

LEFT A LENGTHY LETTER

There were two notes on the little desk in the dead man's hand-writing. One was: "Call my office—Main 393." This Mr. Beswick immediately did.

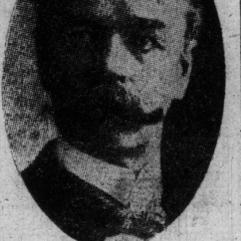

On another sheet of paper pinned down by a paper weight, Dr. Ricker found a letter to all concerned setting forth the cause of the suicide. While the coroner would not give the letter out for publication its contents are fairly well known.

Life's Work Lost

In writing Mr. Sheridan stated that he had decided on this means of doing away with himself because the result of practically all his life work had been lost thru a financial deal. This occurred about fifteen months ago and after its execution Mr. Sheridan was ousted from the presidency and control of the Pease Foundry Company.

RHODES SCHOLAR PASSED AWAY YESTERDAY

Ernest R. Paterson, First Man Chosen From Toronto University to Go to Oxford, Suffered From Anaemia for Several Years, and Died at Residence of Father.

Ernest R. Paterson, first man chosen from Toronto University to go to Oxford, who suffered from anaemia for several years and died at his father's residence.

After an illness which lasted for three years, Ernest Riddell Paterson, B.A., the first Rhodes scholar from the University of Toronto, passed away Sunday morning at the residence of his father, John A. Paterson, K.C., in Wychwood Park. Mr. Paterson suffered from anaemia and his death was anticipated.

While at the university he distinguished himself by his scholarship and by his aptitude for athletics. He was a first-class honor man in classics, and at the same time was the champion tennis player of the college, as well as a member of the senior Rugby team. As a speaker he was considered one of the best at the university. He is also remembered as a frequent contributor to the Rhodes magazine.

When he graduated in 1909 he was given the first Rhodes scholarship, to which he was unquestionably designated by his all round ability.

At Oxford he won further laurels. He enrolled in Balliol College, and his work at classics and English marked him as one of the foremost men of the college. He was chosen captain of the Oxford tennis team and led his associates to victory against their Cambridge opponents. He was also a member of the Oxford soccer team, and he rowed with the Balliol crew. For athletic ability he obtained the "Oxford blue," which is the highest mark of distinction the old university bestows in the way of sport.

After completing his course in Oxford in 1907, when he again took his B.A. degree, he returned to his home in Toronto and secured a position in the Title and Trust Company's office here.

From then on he turned his attention to real estate and established the Square Deal Realty Company, 140 Victoria-street. He was the senior partner of the firm and held considerable property in New Toronto and the suburbs. Sometimes he would call at the plant and talk to the old employees, as he liked to talk about the foundry business in which he spent thirty-five years of his life.

A New Revolver. The revolver with which Sheridan killed himself was new. There were nine steel-nosed bullets in it when it was opened. The tenth cartridge had been automatically thrown out by a spring.

Refused to Talk. When The World asked Coroner Dr. Ricker in the letter about the Ross deal, the doctor would not even say what reason for the suicide was given in the note. He said that friends of Mr. Sheridan did not care to let the press publish the contents of the mis-
