HOW PUBLIC OPINION AFFECTS PUBLIC LIFE

Address of J. A. Macdonald Before the Canadian Club of Halifax.

Before the Canadian Club of Halifax last Tuesday Rev. J. A. Macdonald, editor of The Toronto Globe, gave an address in the assembly hall of the School for the Blind, on 'Public Opinion and Public Life.'

In reporting the speech, The Halifax Herald says: Mr. Macdonald began by defining public opinion as that opinion which most truly represents the thought and judgment of a country, very fact of an organized opposition and by public life he meant that life of thought and activity which finds its most representative expression in the caucus, but of parliament, and a policy public men, in the public movements, once adopted is given some sort of and in the public institutions of a chance to prove its worth.

Public opinion, he said, to be wholesome, must be imformed, intelligent and active. Public spirit is a quality of effective and wholesome public opinton which must be also responsible, deliberate, representative.

Enemies of public opinion were a spirit of mere materialism; the sector disagree within the lines of the spirit of mere materialism, one sectionalism or separatism of the people, the selfish or indolent indifference of the many and the equally selfish but always alert and active operations of the percentage of the the few; and the spirit of cynicism and front without changing ground, the suspicious distruct of public ser- in any case party is not an end in the suspicious distruct of pulsace service that seems unselfish and benevo-for realizing in the nation one's high-

ABOUT CUSTOMS HOUSE

Wherein Complaints Are Made and Refuted as to Clerks and System.

On Thursday morning The World published a comunication headed "Re Customs House Clerks." In it statements were made reflecting upon one of the officials, altho no name was men

The World has investigated and has found that there is absolutely no foundation whatever for the insinua-tions therein contained. As a matter of fact, the official indicated has no dealing with the public at all, his duties confining his attention to a super vision of the clerks of the office. The World regrets that an apparent attempt has been made to take advantage of the opportunity that was given for merchants to point out what are stated to be flaws in the system prevailing in some quarters of the custom house, to deliberately malign one of the officials. Fortunately those who know him are taking the matter in a jocular vein, knowing full well that the insinuations are too absund to be credited, while The World is only too pleased to give the same assurance to the public at large.
