WHEN I AM OLD. When I am old—ind, oh! how soon
Will Life's sweet merhing yield to noon;
And noon's broad, fervid, carnest light
Be shrouded in the solenin night,
Till like a story well-night told
Will seem my Life when I am old.

When I am old this breezy earth Will lose for me its voice of mirth; The streams will have an understone Of sadness, not by right their own, And Spring's sweet pow'r in vain unfold Its rosy charms, when I am old.

When I am old I shall not care
To deck with flowers my faded hair;
Twill be no vain desire of mine,
In rich and costly dreas to shine;
Bright jewels and the brightest gold
Will charm me not when I am old.

When I am old, my friends will be Old and infirm and bowed, like me; Or else, their bodies 'neath the sod, Their spirits dwelling safe with God; The old church bell will then have tolled Above their rest, when I am old.

When I am old I'd rather hend
Thus sadly o'er cach buried friend,
Than ace them lose the earnest truth,
That marks the friend-ship of our youth;
Twill be so sad to have them cold,
Or strange to me, when I am old.

Oh! White Summer Lasts, Enjoy its

Oh! while summer lasts enjoy it!
Let us to the fields repair;
Snatch some hours from toil and study,
Nature's blessed gifts to share.
Ye who stand behind the counter,
Ye who tremble at the loom,
Leave the measure and the shuttle,
Come unto the green fields, come!

Liverpoot. Munificence.—In the month of February, 1798, the government being greatipenses of the war, a voluntary subscription was entered into, for its assistance, in all parts of the kingdom. The sum raised for that purpose in Liverpool amounted to upwards of £17,000, which is equal to a contribution of about £100,000, in the present state of the same time, it was determined to raise an additional volunteer force, to meet the double danger of a threatened invasion from France and an approaching rebellion in Ireland. At this time of peril, upwards of eight hundred new volunteers came forward in defence of their country. The whole volunteer force of Liverpool was then formed into two battalions of infantry, the first commanded by Col. George Case, the second by Colonel Pudsey Dawson; a strong body of artillery, commanded by Jacob Nelson, Esq.; and a troop of cavalry, commanded by Edward Falkner, Esq., of Fairfield. These different corps remained embodied until the peace of Amiens. They, with similar regiments in all parts of the kingdom, formed a large part of the defence of the country, many of the regulars being on foreign service, and upwards of 88,000 of the militia quartered in Ireland, During the rebellion of 1798 the marching of troops through Liverpool was almost incressant. No less than 7,000 militis sailed from Liverpool for Ireland in a single week. The suppression of the Irish rebellion in the summer of 1798, and Nelson's victory of the Nile in the adtumm of that year, which, for a while, cut off the already formidable Bonaparte from Europe, restored confidence, but did not cause any relaxation in the preparations for the defence of the country. At the close of 1798 there were 4,009 French prisoners in Liverpool.—Baines's History of Liverpool.

The Night Blowing Cerege,—There is leaved the first time brought to light, chiefly connected with the close of 1798 there were 4,009 French prisoners in Liverpool.—Baines's History of Liverpool in the summer of 1798 and Nelson's victory of the Night Park, dec

Grand Tentotal Demonstration.—The tectotaliers are about taking advantage of the unusual number of foreigners at this moment drawn to the metropolis for the purpose of visiting the Exhibition, and have announced a "Grand Tectotal Demonstration of all Nations," for the 5th of August, when they are to assemble in Hyde Park, decorated with white roses, and march in procession to the Exhibition.
