Had both leagues decided their championship over the ordinary schedule route, there would have been no difficulty about the post-season series, but there is every indication now that the easterners will have to wait. The Victoria club's games for the trophy cannot be completed before March 21. "If one team or the other wins the Victoria-Toronto series in three straight," said President Quinn, "there will be a chance for Sydney. But if the series runs into four or five games, which is quite possible, I'm afraid the easterners will have to wait until next season."

The Blue Shirts would have made more than this, but the injury to Cameron early in the season cost them $1,500, as they had to buy and pay Com Corbea and George McNamara. The latter cost the club $500 for his release from the Ontario.

Rule Should be Settled

(FROM T. S. ANDREWS)

Milwaukee, Wis., March 11.—There has been considerable argument in this country of late about the boxing rules, especially regarding clean breaks, etc. Different interpretations are given by referees and boxing commissioners regarding these, and as a result the boxers are misled at times as to what rule to follow. The same trouble has been experienced in England, the home of boxing, and in speaking of the matter, Mr. Dyer writes me as follows: "The rules governing boxing are on many points, a great deal, perhaps too much, being left to the discretion of the third man in the ring. Especially is this the case with the much disputed question of clean breaks and ingighting. American and British ideas are totally at variance on the point, though it must be said that the American style of boxing is becoming more and more the fashion with our principal glove artists. "The Queensbury rules contain nothing regulating what is known here as the clean break and a boxer is perfectly justified in delivering a blow coming away from a clinch. It may not look pretty and to some people is not strictly fair play, but the absence of any official ruling opens the door to many abuses by both boxers and referees. "A case in point was the bout last Monday between Kid Lewis and Paul Tili for the featherweight title of Europe. The boys agreed to box under National Sporting Club rules, which are like the Queensbury set and contain no reference to hitting on the break away. The French boy had been given to understand that English referees were strict in their interpretation of the rules and was warned by his advisers not to hit on the break away. That he clinched a great deal more than was necessary is true, but he did not bargain for every time he got an opportunity as Tili broke clean. This went on for several rounds before the referee considered it a legitimate part of the business and then he stipulated the same game. "Now at the National Sporting Club, the chief official will sternly reprimand and disqualify any boxer persisting in hitting on the break away. It will be seen that something ought to be done to rectify the rules on this point, especially as, even in this country, which fathered the boxing game, there is such a diversity of opinion amongst the referees."
