"These were my sires'," he sighed, "Ay, these For missing record held by traitorous arm," rances, from time to time, threw a self-limb the city, and nobody seemed to mind it. But misfortune willed that one shell should throw the entire community into mourning.

Miss Anna Pickens, the daughter of one of our former Governors, never consented to leave the city. Despite the representation of General Beauregard she remained, braving shells and Greek fire, lending the wounded and cheering all with her presence. Among the wounded officers under her care was Mr. Andrew de Rochelle, a descendant of one of the noblest Huguenots of this city. This young man was full of the liveliest gratitude for his fair nurse; gratitude gave birth to more tender sentiment; his suit was listened to; Governor Pickens gave his consent, and the marriage was fixed for the 23rd of April. Lieutenant de Rochelle was on duty at Fort Sumter in the morning, and it was determined the ceremony should take place at the residence of General Bonham. The Episcopal clergyman was asking the bride if she was ready, when a shell fell upon the roof of the building, penetrated to the room where the company, was assembled, burst and wounded nine persons, among them Miss Anna Pickens. The scene that followed cannot be described. Order being at last re-established, the woinded were removed, with the exception of the bride, who lay motionless on the carpet. Her betrothed, leaning and bending over her, was weeping bitterly and trying to stanuch the blood that flowed from a terrible wound under her letherast. A surgeon came and declared that Miss Pickens could live but two hours. We will not paint the general despair. When the wounded girl recovered her consciousness she asked to know her fate. "Andrew," she said, "I beg you tell the truth. If I must die, I can die worthy of you." The young soldier's tears were his answer, and Miss Anna, summoning all her strength, attempted to smille. Nothing could be more heart-rendering than to see the agony of this brave girl struggling in the embrace of death and against nortal pain. The young girl did not reply. She was too weak. A slight flush for an instant came to her pale cheek; it could be seen that hoy and pain were struggling in her spirit for the mastery. Lying upon a sofa, and her budad, dress all attained with blood, her hair dishevelled, she haid never been more beautiful. Helpless as she was, Lieutenant Rochelle took her hand and requested the Rev. Dr. Dickinson to proceed, with the ceremony. When it was time for the dying girl to say yes, her lips parted several times, but she could not articulate. At last the word was spoken and a slight foam rested upon her lips. The dying agony was near. The minister sobbed, with the ceremony. An hour afterwards all was over, and the bridat chamber was the chamber of death. THE TORONTO ST. JOHN, N. B.
