Kentucky Jokes. t was during the Presidential campaign ich resulted in the election of Buchanan, it the writer of the appended sketch, in npany with three other politicians, rode m Paducah to Boston, Ky., in a hack, the way thus:

The joking Judge M was one of the rty, and the bottles that peeped out m the basket under the seat seemed to prove the sparkle of his wit, the flavor his jokes, and the music of his laugh, till the happy contagion even reached e driver.

Our fun was at its highest when Our fun was at its highest when, turning a curve in the road, we saw, down its ot, dusty stretch, a solitary ox cart, with sowner perched upon what proved to be ags of corn. As a kind of advance guard, great, ugly, brindle dog came trotting ong in advance, and attracted by our oise, he threw himself in an attitude of efiance, determined to dispute our adance. With his savage growl, red eyes nd erect bristles, he, indeed, presented a primidable appearance. Judge M. could ot let such an opportunity for a practical ske pass. Said he; ot let such an opportunity for a practical ske pass. Said he;
"I'll bet the drinks for the day that I an run that dog off the road."
"Done," said we.
Stopping our hack, he got out, and threw he skirts of his "swallow tailed" coat over his shoulders, stuck his old slouch hat in the back of his head, and going down in "all-fours," he scampered toward the log with the most frightful yells, reminding one of the fable of the ass in the lion's skin. This was too much for the dog, and, ng one of the fable of the ass in the lion's skin. This was too much for the dog. and, how ling with fright, he took to the brush. The oxen also saw the fearful monster coming down the road, and with one wild bellow they took to the brush, with their tails standing straight out behind. Away they went, with wheels bouncing in the air, bags of corn bursting open, and spilling their contents in a continuous drill. "Whoa, Blaze! Whoa, Ball! O, Lordy! what shall I do?" came from the frightened man on the cart, as he was bounding from side to side, now grapping a cart-pole, then catching at a bag of corn as it were to cover the side. then catching at a bag of corn as it were over the side.

This kind of performance couldn't last long without a change for better or worse, as the oxen went tearing down the steep bank of a little creek and overturned everything in the water, about waist deep. One ox, getting loose, went up the opposite bank and soon disappeared, while the other cowered down, piteously bellowing as we came up to the scene of disaster. There stood the poor man in water to his waist, his wagon overturned, and half his corn soaking in the water, while the other half was scattered in the woods. He looked as the oxen went tearing down the steep bank of a little creek and overturned everything in the water, about waist deep. One ox, getting loose, went up the opposite bank and soon disappeared, while the other cowered down, piteously bellowing as we came up to the scene of disaster. There stood the poor man in water to his waist, his wagon overturned, and half his corn soaking in the water, while the other half was scattered in the woods. He looked scared and pitiful, and said:

"O, Lordy, stranger, don't never do that it any more. I'm ruined!"

It was a splendid success, that joke, and there stood the Judge holding on to a sapling and laughing till the tears ran down his cheeks.

It was a splendid success, that joke, and there stood the Judge holding on to a sapling and laughing till the tears ran down his cheeks.

We took up a subscription for the poor ellow. The Judge headed the list with an amount nearly covering the damages, and we added to it until we left the man in thankfulness that he had sold his corn so well. At the barbecue, the Judge bet all his money on a little horse-race, and lost, and from that, and the effects of his drinks at our expense, we had to carry him drinks at our expense, we had to carry him to our hack on a barn-door. On his way hime he insisted upon standing on his A FISH STORY. - We met a boy on the street, and, without the ceremony of asking our name, he exclaimed : "You just orter been down to the river a while ago !" "Why?" we enquired. "Because a nigger was in there swim-ming, and a big cat-fish came up hehind him and swallowed both of his feet, and went swimming on the top of the water with him; and there came behind another big fish, and the nigger swallowed his tail, and the nigger and two fish were swim-Austin, Texas, Statesman.
