

PREPARE FATHERLAND FOR REVERSE IN WEST

German Correspondents With Troops in France Magnify Horrors of Fighting Against Allied Artillery.

A despatch from Rotterdam says: Max Osborne in a despatch from the Somme front to The Vossische Zeitung, says: "Day and night the British and French guns continuously hurl their murderous lead. Shells burst all around, many exploding before positions where masses of dead are lying. They fling sand and stone splinters over the defenders. They fling, too, torn-off limbs, so when day comes and the men are able to eat the very sight of meat is horrible to them. "The noise tears to pieces all nerves and senses. It continually drums in one's ears. Not a few find their hearing completely gone. The worst of all is the effect of the heavy mines. True, they can be seen coming and one can get out of the way, but if one runs to the right there is a hostile flyer above the trenches who directs the fire of the guns so one has to run to the left. "So it goes on, and one is hunted up and down like a wild beast. There are times when our men curse and are homesick, but in the moment of fighting all their feelings disappear. The sense of duty and discipline hold them together and they are ready with iron decision and bitter courage. "George Wagner, in a despatch to The Koelnische Zeitung, says: "The present line held by the Ger-

BRITISH GAIN NEW SUCCESS

Advance Their Front on Both Sides of Guillemont-Flers Road.

A despatch from London says: A new success was won by General Haig's British troops during Friday night on the Somme front. By a strong attack in the Guillemont sector they advanced their front several hundred yards on both sides of the Guillemont-Flers road, bringing it on even terms with the French advance through Maurepas. The German salient which was left at the point where the British and French fronts join was flattened out and several hundred prisoners taken. In addition, to the north, the British extended their trench progress along the Leisepale salient, taking an additional 300 yards of strongly-defended position.

Meanwhile the French, by strong artillery fire, were repulsing German counter-attacks south of Maurepas, especially in the region of Hill No. 121. This height is now completely in the hands of the French troops. Military experts attach great importance to the capture of Maurepas by the French. Not only does it put into their hands one of the principal supporting points of the German front between the Somme and the Albert-Bapaume high road, but it brings their advance within two miles of Comblis, which powerfully-fortified town they are steadily flanking.

It is reported from Paris that the German corps defeated on Thursday by the French was led in person by the Kaiser's second son, Prince Eitel Friedrich.

On the Verdun front the Germans during the night attempted to storm Fleury. The French War Office reports their complete repulse.

The Germans made a new assault on the French line at the tip of the famous salient of St. Mihiel, but have been repulsed after gaining a footing in French trenches.

MUTILATED SOLDIERS TO BECOME TEACHERS

A despatch from Paris says: With a view of enabling war-mutilated soldiers to be come teachers in the elementary schools, the Government has opened special colleges for their rapid training.

GERMAN FRONT OVERWHELMED BY FRENCH ARTILLERY STORM

Trenches Filled With Troops Brought Up Especially for Counter-Attacks Were Obliterated.

A despatch from Paris says: The latest news from the Somme front emphasizes the methodical character of the French offensive. Wise in past experience, General Foch leaves nothing to chance; he initiates no movement before taking all measures to ensure its complete execution. The recent German counter-attacks, combined with aeroplane activity on a scale unusual since the beginning of July, indicate not only the arrival of reinforcements, but a determination to check at all costs, if possible, the French tide that is steadily swamping their fortifications.

Consequently, the whole German front from Guillemont to Soyecourt was overwhelmed for 72 hours by a mans consists only of a chain of shell holes instead of the girdle of strongly-built and fortified trenches. Immovable men crouch in these holes with no cover from the sun or rain and not the slightest protection against the shells from above. "Hostile flyers tower the positions at a low height. They see the men in the holes and direct the Anglo-French fire with a deadly certainty upon them or else they fire themselves with machine guns. "Everything has to be done at night: the bringing up of reinforcements, removing the wounded and burying the dead. To procure warm food for the men lying out in those horrible conditions is seldom possible. The want of drinking water is leading the men to drink dirty water out of the shell holes where there are human bodies and other things. "When an attack begins the terrors of these places are beyond description. Like the fire rain in Gomorrah the drum fire of the enemy pours from heaven. The little shelter that there is in the trenches or holes is quickly flattened out. With thundering roar heavy shells from the gigantic mine wipe out everything in the neighborhood with their explosion. At the same time a rain of shrapnel falls and poisonous gases roll forward."

Following heavy fighting during the greater part of the night, there was little but artillery activity on the Somme front Sunday, bad weather interfering operations. The British in a strong attack gained a further 200 yards of trench north of Bazentin-le-Petit, capturing a machine gun. For the greater part however, all attacks on both sides resulted in no change of front.

German surprise attacks in the Arras sector, in Lorraine and the Apremont sector, were repulsed. Paris announces, while at Verdun there was only artillery fighting. In several sectors, especially on the Thiaumont-Flers line, the big gun duels reached a high pitch of intensity.

ITALY CONFISCATES AUSTRIAN PALACE

Palazzo di Venezia Seized for Violations of International Law.

A despatch from Rome says: The famous Palazzo di Venezia, property of the Austro-Hungarian Government since 1879, has been seized by Italy as an act of retribution for the violation of international law by Austria. It was announced here on Sunday. The Palazzo di Venezia, a historic and magnificent structure dating from the year 1455, when it was begun by Cardinal Pistorio Barbo, who later became Pope Paul IV, was presented in 1560 by Pope Pius IV to the Republic of Venice, with which it came in 1797 into the possession of Austria. Since then up to the break between Italy and Austria it served as the residence of the Austrian Ambassador to the Vatican.

OPEN HUNGER RIOTS IN HAMBURG PORT

People There Also Clamor for Peace—"Those at the Top Need War."

A despatch to The London Chronicle from Amsterdam says: "For a week past the port of Hamburg has been in a state of revolution. One who has just 'escaped,' as he expressed it, tells an extraordinary story of the gradually rising exasperation of the population, until early last week they broke out into open hunger riots and peace demonstrations. The authorities appear to have been taken by surprise, for the police were unable and perhaps unwilling to quell the disturbances. They were completely overpowered, and before the soldiers could arrive angry crowds had forced their way through several of the principal streets and smashed every shop and business house window. Only vigorous military measures were able to restore order. The utmost severity is shown to all who venture outdoors, except during strictly limited daylight hours."

It is estimated that 200,000 people from the United States annually visit the Canadian National Exhibition.

EVERY ATTACK BRITISH GAIN

Thiepval and the Leisepale Redoubt Slowly Being Won by Haig's Troops.

A despatch from London says: The two most powerfully fortified German positions north of the Somme—Thiepval and the Leisepale redoubt—are slowly being won by the British. Despite the utmost efforts of the Teutons to win back their lost ground in these two vital sectors, General Haig's territorial troops not only are repulsing all German attacks, but are steadily increasing their gains. They have won a further 600 yards of trenches along the Thiepval-Courcellette road and, despite the great concentration of German troops in the neighborhood, have further pressed in both east and south-west of Mouquet farm.

The Prussian Guard, proudest corps of the Fatherland, has been sent to the threatened front, but despite their most desperate efforts have been unable to win back any of the important terrain which has been taken in the British advance, according to a report from General Haig.

Attacks were delivered not only in the Thiepval region, but against the British lines west of Guillemont and the French front south of Maurepas. All these attacks were repulsed.

Hand-to-hand fighting of the greatest violence continued throughout Saturday around the ruins of the Mouquet farm, General Haig reports. On this sector, as well as in the new trenches south of Thiepval, Worcestershire and Wiltshire men hold the British lines. It was these troops who repulsed the Prussian Guard.
