An Italian Legend.
Adam—although it is not Written in Sacred Lore—Had children many in Eden; Their number twenty-four.
One day as Adam with them Was sporting on the sward, Nath the trees, he saw a-come The Angel of the Lord.
Fearing lest he'd be derided, That they so many were,
Adam hid half his children In a rocky thicket fair.
Their guest sat down among them;
And such discourse they bore As children and angels might With Heaven just next door.
When they had ceased their sporting, "A special blessing I bear," Up spoke the smiling Angel,
"To these, thy children fair."
"To all the children of Adam, Gathered about my knee,
Of health and wealth, the breeze,
The dew of prosperity:
"And may they never know sickness, Or death when such things shall be,
But life be as on this green sward."
And thus the garden tree, Then up spoke Father Adam, Half in sadness and half in shame;
"For these my other children, A blessing I crave—the same."
"When I saw thee approaching, "Mid the noise I made them hide; But repeat to them the blessing, For the goodness of God is wide."
Slowly the puzzled Angel Made answer: "That cannot be,
I have the Lord God's blessing, To the child from that I could see."
"But it shall be so earth here, Through all the coming years, When one of the children hid-den As this time is found in water."
"His happier brothers or sisters, May the blessing with him divide; Nor be its own share diminished,
For the blessing of God is wide."
And so it ever has been,
And so it ever will be When a fortune child shares his blessing With one in misery.
Somewhat, around about him In the dull world, he deserves The secret of Eden's thickets, And the glance of an Angel's eyes.

An Alabama Romance.
In the spring of 1865 several ladies of Cahaba, Ala., collected their jewelry and silver together and buried it near the town. Among the ladies were Mrs.
General E. W. Pettus, Mrs. Sallie A.
Thorn and Mrs. M. M. Roberts. The ladies took the valuable package late one afternoon in February, and with their own hands dug a hole and buried their possessions to hide them from the Union soldiers, who were at that time passing through the state. When the ladies were burying the box they little suspected they were being watched by a party of negroes, who waited a while until they were out of sight and resurrected the box. The valuables were scattered on the ground and a division made. After the excitement of the war had passed the ladies decided to unearth their long-lost treasure. When the spot was reached the box was found empty. All efforts to recover the property were in vain, and the owners became reconciled to their losses. Time with its changes rolled on, and the families became scattered through the states of Louisiana and Texas. A few days since some members of the Pettus family were dining with Mrs. General Pettus at her home in Selma. The party included Mrs. Gen. Pettus, Mrs. Anthony Jones, and Mrs. Frank Pettus. During the conversation the ladies began to discuss the war, and how hard it was to save the silverware. Mrs. Anthony Jones said: "That reminds me of some spoons and forks left by a Union officer with the Fergusons family that I think must have had a history. The silver had the initials J. A. T. on them. I heard that the officer made every effort to find the owner of the silverware, and when he could not he left it with the Fergus-sons, stating that it was not his and would leave it for the owners. He left for the north, and the Fergusons went to Brazil. On their return the silver was identified and returned to the owner."

THREATENED WITH LYNCH LAW.
A Salvationist who procured a divorce and married a girl of thirteen.
CORNING, N. Y., Feb. 15.—This morning the so-called Major Pegley, a notorious Salvationist leader, and his baby bride left here on the Fall Brook road for Seneca Falls, his home. Four days ago Pegley got a divorce, or said he had done so, from a convert he made at Bradford, Pa. He then went to Wellsville, N. Y., and on Sunday married a girl named Paine, another convert, who is not yet 14 years of age, and is very slender and delicate. The people of Wellsville were so outraged at the marriage that a delegation of citizens with ropes boarded the train and followed Pegley to this place, declaring that they would string him up.
But by keeping in the drawing room car and hastening to a hotel near by by arriving here he escaped violence. He Early Marriages.

I, for one, am against early marriage as a general rule, and agree with much that "Land o' Cakes" says. As I am a young I hope I do not look at the question from a prejudiced point of view; but seeing the bad trade, poverty and wretchedness that now exists in all parts of the country, and especially the Black country, with which I am more intimately connected, I am of the opinion that early marriages are to be regretted in too many instances. I do not speak from any practical knowledge of the matter, but from observation, and I have observed such things pretty closely. I must say that my ideas are decidedly against young men to endeavor to support a wife on perhaps $8 or $10 a week, and some much less. I know of many such cases.
As an instance of how some young men regard the matter I may repeat what I once heard a young man remark. "Well," said he, "I am poor enough off now. I can't be any poorer if I get married, so I shall do so." This, no doubt, sounds rather harsh to sentimental people, but it is a remark that is very often expressed. "Cheshire's" early marriages shows what a happy union should be, but my opinion is that such instances are few and far between. I think that much misery could be obviated if there were fewer youthful marriages, as many young men rush into matrimony before they have anything like learned a trade and are in a position to support a wife as she should be supported.

Death of John B. Gough.
PHILADELPHIA, Feb. 18.—John B. Gough, the famous temperance orator, died this evening. He was attacked by apoplexy Monday last while lecturing and he fell prostrate to the floor. He was an Englishman by birth, born at Sand Gate, Aug.
22, 1817. Mr. Gough was a speaker of a very peculiar type and attracted much attention by his platform mannerisms as by his eloquence of language. He was a man of large generosity and devoted much of his wealth to good works. He was a reformed drunkard and his personal history has been told time and again by Mr. Gough as a warning to others. He has done inestimable service in the cause of temperance. He had of late years resided at Worcester, Mass.
In 1829 he immigrated to New York, learned the trade of bookbinder, and fell into habits of intemperance. In October, 1832, he was induced to attend a temperance meeting. Here he took the pledge of total abstinence, and soon began publicly to advocate the principle. His reputation as an orator spread through the United States and Canada, and reached England. In 1853, the London Temperance League invited him to visit Great Britain. The visit, intended to last only six weeks, was protracted to two years, during which he advocated the cause of temperance throughout the island. He then resumed his labors in America. In 1857 he again visited England and lectured with still greater success. In 1859, when he returned to America, he then began to lecture on other topics. In 1866 he published his autobiography and a volume of orations in 1874. In 1875 he announced that he was about to leave the field as a public lecturer, but subsequently again took the platform, paying another visit to Great Britain in 1878, since which time he has been lecturing in connection with bureaus.
