

- A. We then walked up to Pte Brisson and attempted to make him realize that he had to go with us.
- Q. What did you do then?
- A. From talking in that manner Pte Brisson agreed to leaving along with us.
- Q. What did you talk about to Brisson?
- A. I cannot remember word for word but I know I referred to the fact that we had to go for a ride.
- Q. Was there anything peculiar about Brisson?
- A. Didn't seem to recognize us or at least myself.
- Q. Why do you say that?
- A. I say that because Pte Brisson had a queer appearance, he looked rather crazy, he was muttering and making gestures.
- Q. Was Pte Brisson aware that you were from the Regimental Police?
- A. No sir.
- Q. Was there any other civilian in the house with you?
- A. Not in the front apartment sir.
- Q. How many apartments did you visit in that house?
- A. Three apartments, sir, but there were no civilians in the apartment in which we first saw him.
- Q. What happened then after you took Brisson?
- A. Before leaving Pte Brisson said he had some business to attend in another apartment.
- Q. What kind of business was that?
- A. At that time I didn't know.
- Q. Did you find out later?
- Def: Can he ask that?
- JA: Not unless the accused told him.

Prosecutor continues

- Q. Did the accused tell you what he was going to do?
- A. No.
- Q. What happened then?
- A. We then walked towards another apartment, a kitchen, as we were to open the door a civilian appeared.
- Q. Do you know the name of that civilian?
- A. No sir.
- Q. What happened then?
- A. (No answer)

JA: Just a moment, find out if he would be able to recognize that civilian if he saw him and if the civilian is here I think he should be brought into the Court.

Prosecutor continues

- Q. Would you be able to recognize the civilian again?
- A. I am not sure enough to say yes.

JA: Find out what sex the civilian was.
