Blue roses have at last been produced and are grown at Kew Gardens, London.

An English mathematician has figured out that it takes only a "four-leaf clover" whatever the name, to run a watch, and that a single horse-power would run all the watches in creation.

A certain Chinese lady, named Cheong Chuk Kwai, is going on a tour round the world. She is rich, and well educated in English. Having progressive ideas, she is going to see what Europe and America are like. This is the first and only instance in which a Chinese lady has ever attempted such a venture.

Railway travel is fast losing its perils. According to reports recently made public in London, not a passenger was killed on any English railway in 1901, and only eleven people who were not passengers received fatal injuries. American railways may be better equipped than those across the water, but they have not yet approached the new English record for safety.

A remarkable piece of railroad engineering is about to be begun by the Southern Pacific Railroad in Utah. For the sake of saving four and a half miles, the railroad is to build a new line one hundred and five miles long, which for part of the way will run on a timber trestle across the Great Salt Lake. It now runs around the northern shore of the lake, over a route full of sharp curves and heavy grades. The work will take three years, and will cost two and a half million dollars.

A writer in the "Illustrated Sporting and Dramatic News" tells of a close shave of canine murder. The owner of an Air-dale terrier bought a small Cocker spaniel pup, and it was made much of by the members of the family. "Scottie," the terrier, utterly ignored the pup's existence. One morning the puppy was missing, and, after a fruitless search, the gardener remembered seeing "Scottie" come out of a rhododendron bed, with nose and face much begrimed with earth. There the body of the pup was found, and it was plain that "Scottie" had first killed and then buried the poor little creature.

A year ago, says the "Youth's Companion," three prominent physicians told a certain New Yorker that he was afflicted with locomotor ataxia, and beyond the power of cure. Thereupon this man, who, even when he used two canes, "floundered around wherever his legs chose to take him," went to a gymnasium. He took exercise in the form of stunts, and he was, but he persisted in it, and when he was not exercising he stayed out of doors. Presently he began to ride the bicycle, too, although he could not stop his machine except by putting on the brake and falling off. After seven months of hard work his legs were "still wobbly," but he began to play handball. Through the winter he kept up regular practice in the gymnasium, gaining all the time surely though slowly. This spring he had the reward of a year of prodigious and painful effort. He could take forty-mile rides on his bicycle. The doctors say he has perfectly recovered. He says he never felt better. Here is inspiration for invalids. Many a man might cure himself of "incurable" disease, as this man did, if he would only make a fight for health.

Abolition of the Night.

The strenuous character of modern life is shown by the way in which we turn night into day. Two hundred years ago the night was really night, and everybody went to bed early and slept until daylight. Streets were lighted feebly or not at all. Footpads lurked in every shadow for the belated wayfarer, and, in the loneliness of the streets, were secure against interruption. "Lue watch or patrol was abroad, but it was inadequate to police a large city.

Midnight, two centuries ago, was a holy, a haunted, and a fearsome hour. The man who stayed out until midnight went home in fear and trembling, and lost his reputation if his late homecoming were bruited about. None but the gayest, most reckless, and most dissipated young blades were ever out of bed in the small hours of the morning. Throughout the greater part of Christendom, two hundred years ago, curfew rang at nine or ten o'clock in the evening, and all lights were put out or were concealed, behind stuffed cracks and blanketed windows, from the eye of the prying watchman.

But now! how changed! Midnight has lost its charms and thrills. Graves no longer yawn and give forth their dead, nor do ghosts walk at the stroke of 12. No pensive Madeleine, trembling in her chaste couch, sits up nowadays at midnight of St. Agnes' eve to view her lover in a looking-glass. Midnight has become commonplace. Familiarity with it has bred contempt. One hardly ever goes to bed before that hour. Life is too short that we should waste the precious hours between blankets. Slumber, such as our forefathers knew, has fled our eyes. We cannot afford to give ten or twelve hours of sleep to the twenty-four to slothful sleep. Six or seven hours of dreamful, fretful dozing make up our full allowance. The twenty-four hours are hardly enough for work and sport, and we would make the day thirty-six hours long if we could.

The modern mind is appalled, observes the San Francisco "Bulletin," at thought of the immense waste of time which occurred in those epochs—literally, the dark ages—before gas, the arc, and incandescent lights, owl cars, and other inventions robbed the night of its blackness, and when men used to sleep soundly and long.

A large part of the population in large cities, now works at night. At midnight the streets are crowded, and at three o'clock in the morning there are many, beside the roysterers, to be met. Not a few of the mills and manufacturing in Europe run all night. When the ground is valuable, and every hour of idleness means loss of thrift for the owner, building contractors in large cities think little of putting on a night shift, and, with the help of searchlights, employing the whole twenty-four hours in the erection of a skyscraper. An army of bakers, printers, craftsmen, and tradesmen of all sorts toil at night and go home in the early morning. The telephone service never ceases for a moment. One can have a messenger boy at any hour. There are playhouses which advertise a continuous performance. Owl cars in every large city run on nearly every line. In short, we have very nearly abolished the night.

The Breakfast Food

Discussing the breakfast food fad, a writer in an English exchange says: Since I began to write this article I have invented a new food, or, rather, the name of one, which is the only important thing. Of course you must understand that this would use about one part of sawdust to a thousand of ordinary nutritious substance. Now observe how it is advertised, and agree with me that the game is really one of the imagination. Indeed, in the breakfast food craze I see the one path to fortune left open to the craftsman of pure letters.

First, I would take large plain spaces of newspaper and hoarding with the words "Watch this space for the new Breakfast Food" printed in a field of white. Stage number one: the imagination awakened.

Second, I would, retaining the same spaces, substitute for the printed words a bold picture of a growing oak tree. Stage number two: curiosity is excited.

Third, I would take away my oak tree, and in type of simple boldness announce:

PILGRIM OAKS.

That's All.

And this completes stage number three, which would set all the world of breakfast food eaters agog.

But the serious affair of fortune would be the fourth stage. I should stand or fall by that. Here it is, only you are to suppose it bursting on the world in half-page displayed advertisements in every daily newspaper:

ABOUT OAKS.

English Oak is strength and substance. It is stouter and lasts longer than any other wood. There is more strength in an Oak than in an Ox or an Oat. Then why not EAT OAKS?

YOUR BREAKFAST does not satisfy you. Why? Because your day's work is built on your breakfast, and you cannot safely build on sand—you must use timber. All Breakfast Foods except ours are like sand; they support energy for an hour or two and then Sink Away, leaving a sudden vacancy and weakness. But Oaken timber never sinks, and we have invented a new Food that has all the supporting strength of the stoutest timber. Try it. It will support you.

PILGRIM OAKS

is a pure breakfast food, prepared, under medical supervision, from the hearts of sound English forest oaks, cut with silver saws.

In breakfast logs, ready to serve, 2s 0d per dozen.

In faggots for children and invalids, 1s 9d per dozen.

No Cooking. No Milk. No Condiments.

JUST OAKS.

"A log or faggot of Pilgrim Oaks, with a teaspoonful of clear spring water, makes a delicious breakfast."—"Stethoscope."

Suggestions for a Short Spring Course of Lectures.

(To be delivered before any audience of sufficiently advanced Socialists views.)

Lecture I.—Shakespeare as the True Socialist should see him.

Synopsis of Lecture

1. Fundamental Maxim of Society—"All Men are, or ought to be, born equal."

2. First commandment of the Social Decalogue: "Thou shalt not excel thy fellows." He who violates this law an envious man, a wealth and a breaker of the Social Bond.

3. The pre-eminence of Shakespeare plainly established by existence of such works as "Hamlet," "Macbeth," etc., etc.

4. The generally accepted estimate of Shakespeare a mistaken one, and founded on a false conception of merit.

5. Shakespeare in his true light as the Arch-"Out-Topper," and enemy of the community.

6. Final verdict upon Shakespeare—Anathema Maranatha.

Lecture II.—Wordsworth and his Work as the outcome of a Cringing Injustice.

Synopsis.

1. The natural beauties of the Lake District the chief inspiration of Wordsworth. Probable arrest of his poetic development had his surroundings been those of the Black Country.

2. The inequality in the beauty of nature surrounding a glaring injustice.

3. Suggested remedy:

(a) Total number of natural beauties of England counted and classified; thus: number of mountains, number of lakes, of trees, of meadows, and so on, ascertained.

(b) Average number of natural beauties as apportioned to each square mile ascertained, e.g., one hill, one lake, forty trees, one-fourth of an acre meadow-land, and so on.

(c) Funds supplied from Imperial Treasury to carry out transference of natural features from one part of England to another, thus making the scenery for each square mile uniform.

(d) Expense a drain on Treasury, but justice thereby done to all citizens in all parts of England.

Lecture III.—The Marriage of King Cophetua and the Beggar-Maid no pleasing incident, but an act of the highest injustice.

Synopsis.—I. Beauty of Beggar-Maid apparently the sole reason of King Cophetua's choice.

2. Plain or even squint-eyed beggar-maid just as worthy of promotion to rank of Queen, hence injustice of marriage.

3. Suggestions for removal of inequality of beauty in Society.

(a) All women to be placed by Local Commissioners in five classes of descending value of beauty, A, B, C, D, E—C representing the average.

(b) All female dress to consist of uniforms designed by members of the Royal Academy, and arranged in ascending values of beauty, a, b, c, d, e—e representing average.

(c) Women compelled by law to wear the uniform of the class corresponding to their own; thus, women of class A (beautiful) to wear uniforms of class A (unbecoming), while women of class E (plain) to wear uniforms of class e (highly becoming).—"Punch."

It does not say An Revoir.

Grymes—You bet your life money talks. Ukerdek—What did it ever say to you? Grymes—"Tag."

"USED BY ROYALTY."

Mr. T. H. Estabrooks secured an excellent advertisement for Red Rose Tea when it was selected for the use of T. R. H., the Duke and Duchess of Cornwall and York, during their recent visit. Its selection is a guarantee of its very superior quality. Red Rose Tea is sold by a number of our leading grocers.

Some people never cast their bread upon the water until it is too late for their own use.

Birth-marks which mark and mar the outside of the body are a grief to every mother whose children may bear them. But for every child who bears a birth-mark on the skin there are many who bear an indelible birth-mark on the mind. Nervous mothers have nervous children and many a man and woman owes an irritable and despondent temperament to those days of dread when the mother waited the hour of her maternity. The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription strengthens the mother for her trial. With strength comes a buoyancy of spirits and quietness of mind, which is one of the happiest gifts a mother can bestow on her offspring. By giving vigor and elasticity to the delicate womanly organs "Favorite Prescription" practically does away with the pain of maternity and makes the baby's advent as natural and as simple as the blossoming of a flower. There is no opium, cocaine or other narcotic contained in "Favorite Prescription."

It jars a man to be told that he could have made a fortune in another occupation.
