ANTONIO DI CARARA

A PADUAN TALE

He had already given his farewell (Count, "and now onward." of the famous pass of the Brenner, and as his guide pointed it out to him in the distance, rising sharp and boldly among a wilderness of prely among a wilderness of pre-s that seemed less a part of world than the works of a former fell again; and, sleeping on Night fell again; and, sleeping on the snow with no other canopy than a shelf of rock, and no other shelter than the stunted foliage of a wild pine, he felt a delight in rest, a keenness of enjoyment even in his couch of snow and his pillow of stone, that he had never experienced in the Carara Palace. Real hunger made the simplest food a banquet, real fatigue made the rudest resting-place a couch of down. He had discovered what the Roman tyrant sought for in vain in all his tyrant sought for in vain in all his silken luxury,—a new pleasure. He was on his feet by dawn, and prepared to scale the mountains with foot as elastic as their own chamois. But the contrabandist hung back. "We had better not be too much in a hurry this morning," said he, pointing to the pass, "for the old brute there is angry. Look how he raises up his bristlesl ike a wild boar, and if we were but a league or two nigher, we should hear him howling and gnashing his teeth. We must stay where we are till the old savage is quiet." The Count's comprehension of this metaphorical displeasure was not aided by any further discussion. The But the contrabandist hung back. "We aided by any further discussion. The anded by any further discussion. The contrabandist either would not, or could not, explain farther than by pointing to the pass, which now certainly appeared to put on some resemblance to the ridgy back of a wild boar, a phenomenon not uncommon in the mountain atmosphere, and which is understood universally to predict a storm. "The weather promises ill but, my business admits of no delay. What my business admits of no delay. What is to be done in case of a tempest?" asked the Count. "Return to the caserne—what else could be done?" answered his companion, sullenly. "Another league," said Carara, "and your pay shall be doubled." His guide hesitated, but surveying the Count's face of determination, and seeing him already striding onward through the snow-rifts, he at length made up his mind and followed. As they reached the next ascent, the prospect was still the next ascent, the prospect was still more gloomy; the wind had lulled and

and the complete the control of the flower and the control of the

He had already given his farewell to the old soldier, and was forcing his way through the snow, when he found himself followed by the contrabandist. This hardy fellow, a native of the Tarentaise, had waited until he saw the Count's resolution wrought to its height; the solid purse which had been shown during the treaty with the peasants appeared to him a matter which should not be carelessly considered; and, with the intention of sharing in it, amicably in the way) of service, or if not in any other way that might be effectual, he now proposed to join the Count as a guide. Carara was glad to find a companion, rough as he might be, and the travellers pushed forward vigorously. Two days toil at last brought them within sight of the famous pass of the Brenner, and as his guide pointed it out to him in the distance, rising sharp and boldly among a wilderness of prehis entire strength into the blow of which he struck his intended murderer. It was given with good intent, and was tremendous. The assassin sprang upward with the pain, recled a few feet backward to the edge of the precipice, found the ground giving way with him, uttered a roar of despair, and threw himself at his full length, grasping the ground. The effort was convulsive but it only prolonged his agony. The snow yielded with every grasp more and more; at every new struggle he approached closer to the dreadful declivity, until a last despairing bound loosened the whole mass, and he went headlong. His yell rang in the air as he shot downwards. All was silence. He was shattered into atoms.

The blood trickling from Carara's forehead recalled him from gazing

The blood trickling from Carara's forehead recalled him from gazing with horror on the depth where this miscreant had plunged, and told how nearly he had run the chance of lying beside him. But, as if all the evils of the day had passed with the last breath of the treacherous guide, the air began to clear, the storm visibly slackened, and by one of those changes to frequent in the Alpine tracts, the clouds rolled off, and a broad burst of sunshine gladdened earth and heaven. Even the violence of the wind had prepared his route, the road had been partially cleared to the summit of the pass; the wild bare back of the Brenner had lost its ominous elevation; and a long line of silver sparkling among friends were on the road to the famous capital of the Lombards.

If Carara's spirit had not been so deeply absorbed by the momentous nature of his mission, his eye might have revelled long and richly among the landscapes that lay before him as he hurried along the Milanese. The flatness of the territory enfeebled it to the spectator who has but just descended from the grandeur of the Alpine amphitheatre. But the joyous profusion, the exuberance of colour, and produce of harvest and fruitage, and the almost extravagance of fertility that covers the Lombard plains, the whole outpouring of the cornucopia of corn, flowers, wine and oil, make the approach to this noble city one of the most delicious banquets ever offered to the gaze of man. It was now in the full glow of harvest, robed in its autumnal glory. The land, from east to west, from north to south, was a vineyard. Thousands and tens of thousands crowded every road to the capital with the produce of one of the pass; the wild bare back of the Brenner had lost its ominous elevation; and a long line of silver sparkling among its piles of eternal granite, showed where the celebrated cascade of the pass poured down those waters, which so singularly divide themselves to the extremities of Europe, one-half of the stream splitting off to the Adige and the Adriatio, and the other to the Danube and the Euxine.

The pass was reached. Carara stood on the summit of the Brenner, and when his eye glanced back over the frozen region, the kingdom of winter through which he had toiled, the impression on his heart was gratitude and wonder. But here this toil was at an end. The Austrian government had provided for the remainder of the road. Soldiery were stationed from point to clear the way for the Imperial couriers, on the occasion of the Monarch's projected visit to his Italian states; and in three days he entered the time-worn, and heavily-flourished portals of the "ancient and noble inn of the Swartz Adler," at Innspruck, which he found crowded with aides-de-camp, dragoons, chamberlains and valets enough to have driven silence and sleep from the cavern of Morpheus himself.

self into his arms. But the astonish mant was equally great, if more gravely demonstrated, on the side of the imperial officer. He gazed on Carara's countenance with a look of fixed incredulity. However, the recognition was at last complete. The friends sat down to table together, and their singular them in conversation for half the night. The sudden departure of the Emperor was now explained. The Republican French had exhibited symptoms of renewing their attacks on Lombardy, of which the Monarchical French had exhibited symptoms of renewing their attacks on Lombardy, of which the Monarchical French had a li every age been so fond. The time pressed; an insurrectionary more hardy, of which the Monarchical French and in every age been so fond. The time pressed; an insurrectionary more hardy, of which the Monarchical French and in every age been so fond. The time pressed; an insurrectionary more insurance in the power of talky. Deep the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of talky been organised in the north and the propose of the sword. But this dress, 'me addit, and the propose of the sword. But this dress,' me addit, and the propose of the sword in the propose of the sword. But this dress,' me addit, and the propose of the sword in the

(To Be Continued.)

A CANVASSER'S EXPERIENCE.

uffered From Kidney Trouble and Rheu matism—Was Becoming Despondent When Aid Reached Him. From the Journal St. Catharines

One oft he most recent witnesses One of the most recent witnesses about Fonthill and vicinity regarding the virtues of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills is John F. Price, who is widely known in the Niagara District as he has been on the road as an advertiser and canon the road as an advertiser and canwasser for six years, and has thousands of acquaintances. Altis complete cure has added fresh lustre to the reputation of this great medicine. Hearing of Mr. Price's sufferings and restoration, a history of his case was requested. His story is:—"I am 26 years of age and have been afflicted with rheumatism for seven years. At times I have been unable to get my clothes of the more off without assistance, and have often been compelled to have my food cut for me at table. In the winter of 1897 I was attacked with la grippe which settled in my kidneys. I then became so ill that I was compelled to abandon all employment. At that I me my liver and kidneys combined in what seemed to me their last attack. I used several medicines and doctored in Buffalo and St. Catharines without getting any relief, so my confidence in medicine was about gone. I was getting no rest day or night and was becoming despondent finally I was persuaded to try In what seemed to me their last attack. I used several medicines and doctored in Buffalo and St. Catharines without getting any relief, so my confidence in medicine was about gone. I was getting no rest day or night and was becoming despondent finally I was persuaded to try on any confidence in all eight boxes, and am now able to state that it feel better than in the past ten years. These pills are the nearest to a specific of anything I ever used, and they are the cheapest and best medicinal ever tested, having thoroughly reached my case and effected a cure. I feel so gratified for the relief I have obtained that I think it my duty to publicly make this statement. If all who are suffering will give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills an honest trial, I am is user they will be as enthusiastic in their praise as I am.

THE INCREASE OF NATIONS.
While European Russia will need only forty-five years or so, Germany about sixty-five years or so, Germany about sixty-five years or so, Germany about sixty-five years to double its population. What signifies the loss of Alsace Lorraine's 1,500,000 souls compared with the loss France suffers every day? In the last five years the German population has increased by 3,000,000, who are every one fully German. France meanwhile has increased her people by only 175,000, who are

While European Russia will need only forty-five years or so, Germany about sixty-five years, Austria-Hungary, seventy years, England eighty years and Italy 110 years, it will take France over 860 years to double its population. What signifies the loss of Alsace Lorraine's 1,500,000 souls compared with the loss France suffers every day? In the last five years the German population has increased by 3,000,000, who are every one fully German. France meanwhile has increased her people by only 175,000, who are not even of French nationality. The increase of a nation is of the utmost importance to the success of its countries.

THE HEIGHT OF SOLDIER

Decline in the Average Stature of Fight-ing Men as European Armies Arc Increased.

As the size of modern armies is inreased the average height of fighting men is diminished. The Tageblatt of Berlin ascribes the reduction in the average stature of soldiers in modern armies to conscription, and says that in the German army it is now only 60.63 inches. In the British Army the height is 64.69 inches, showing the tallness of the average Englishman and Scotchman. Frenchmen and Spaniards are taken at 1.54 metres. Italians at 1.58 metres, 61 inches, and the same minimetres, 61 inches, and the same minimum measurement is the rule in Austria. The Russian minimum is 1.54 metres, and in the United States it is 1.619 metres, 63.78 inches. In 1860, before the beginning of the American civil war and before the general arming of Europe, the average height of men serving in the various European armies was as follows, given in inchestalian, 65; Spaniard, 66.5; French, 66; Hungarian, 66.1; Austrian, 66.5; Belgian, 66.9; Russian, 67; English, 67.5; Irish, 68; Scotch, 68.5, and Norwegian 69.

Irish, 68; Scotch, 68.5, and Norwegian 69.

Although the average height of soldiers has decreased during the last few years considerably in those countries in which conscription is the rule, it is found generally that in countries in which peaceful conditions prevail so great standing army is maintained, the stature of new soldiers is gradually increasing. This is shown conspicuously in the case of Sweden, where the average height of new soldiers between 1840 and 1850 was 66 inches, 66.2 between 1850 and 1860, 66.8 between 1870 and 1870, 66.8, between 1870 and 1880, and 69 between 1880 and 1890, and 37 per cent. in the decade beginning 1840, 35 per cent in the decade beginning 1840, 35 per cent in the decade beginning 1860, and 33 per cent. in the decade beginning in 1880, to 30 per cent. at present. The number of conscripts now rejected on account of height is less every year, in consequence, perhaps, of the fact that the minimum height limit of the French Army has been steadily decreased. American soldiers have preserved during many years the same height substantially, though the fact is well known that soldiers from the Western and Southwestern States same neight substantially, though the fact is well known that soldiers from the Western and Southwestern States are, as a rule, taller than those from the East and from the Southern At-lantic States.

PERFECT TRUTH AT LAST.

With delight will the woman who is far seeing and up to the times go about her task of trunk packing this summer. No longer is she to have visions of possibly crushed gowns at the end of her journey, and of hats"squashed" out of all semblance to the original styles. For there has come a fresh era in trunks and "boxes" and packing will have no more terrors.

box locks in precisely the same manner as does a trunk. Not only does its cover lift up, but on opening one of the sides falls. Thus any hat can be taken out or put back without disturbing the others.

A POINT AGAINST HIM

He's free even from a breath of suspicion, declared she who is his best girl.

Oh, I don't know, replied the jealous friend. He never took me to the thea-ter yet that cloves did not give him a breath of suspicion.

NEW PIGMENT.

A Scotch artist has discovered that a pigment of great beauty of color can be made from the smut of the oat, the color being a deep, rich amber shade.