It was about Moffatt and Cook went to Sanford's When the constables rapped at the door they found it locked After repeated rappings the order was giv to break in the door. About that time a head came to the upstairs winlow and said they would come down and open the door. The Chief went up to Sanford's bedroom and found along he had a warrant for his arrest Sanford replied "all right" got up and started clothing himself. He had put on his trousers and vest and slipped on his boots not lacing them, when he asked permission to get into the next room to get a collar button. It was granted, the Chief following him to the door. As soon as the prisoner got opposite a window which evidently had been opened for his convenience by some one in the house, he bounded through at like a cat, landed upon a low shed upon which the window opened, jumped to the ground like a flash, and was out of range of the Chief's gun. Sanford cut across the flats like a Marathon runner, with the constables in hot pursuit, firing at
