W. H. Norris still sells the celebrated New Williams Sewing Machines. Sole agents for Colchester Co. Do not believe the stories that are at present circulated by the representatives of other machines, that I have lost the agency formerly held by me. I have been selling the New Williams Sewing Machines in Truro for three years. I have always endeavored to treat all my customers with fairness and in all cases fulfilled all promises and guarantees given. I am still in the business as agent for the New Williams, and as I have always satisfied my customers in the past so I mean to do in the future.

CHASTLY FIND. On Friday last Mr. James was on pick-up a field on the farm of Mr. E. S. Ashby, Walsby, near Hants, when an examination proved to be the remains of a human hand. It was found apparently on the right hand of a full grown person from the first joint, but all the other bones are perfect. Portions of the skin and flesh, clinging to the skeleton, was found lying exposed on the surface. Where it came from is a mystery. The chastly relic is now in possession of Mr. C. W. Linn of the HIGHLAND.

MR. EDITOR:—In my letter published in the GUARDIAN of the 15th inst, there are two mistakes which I would like to draw your attention to. I do not know whether it is my mistake or not. The first is the sentence, "Now I would ask 'A Farmer' if he knows that some evil disposed person was making nightly visits to his open gran and carrying away his grain would be like it." The word "evil" should be "lock." The other is, "But our N. P. was the means of helping of those manufacturers from stopping work, etc." But our N. P. was the means of bringing some of those manufacturers from stopping work, etc. I wish it should be.

Years truly, ANOTHER FARMER.

On Tuesday evening last a small audience gathered in the basement of St. John's Church to hear Rev. Canon Partridge of Halifax lecture on "Religion in Politics." In strong language the lecturer arraigned all bores and the boodling practices so common in political life to day. We heard with deep sorrow of the untimely death of Mr. George M. O'Hall, travelling passenger agent of the I. C. R., which took place at the Church Hospital Halifax last Saturday morning.

Mr. O'Hall was for a number of years head clerk in the office of the District Supt., Truro, and was well known and liked in Truro. His funeral took place yesterday from St. John's Church and was largely attended.
