Reuben Draper, of this place, was taken ill with this awful trouble about five years ago. He was cured and so many have asked him how it was done that he has decided to give the whole story for publication:

In the death of Andrew Heyward, Chatham has tost another old and respected citizen. Death has been parsicularly busy of late in the Maple City. Within a year or so many representative men among its citizens have passed away, including Rufus Stephenson, W. A. Campbell, C. J. Stephenson, W. A. Campbell, C. J. O'Neil, W. E. Hamilton, William Douglas, Ebenezer Scane, and now Andrew Heyward.

This highly valuable M.S. was known to be in Florence about 30 years ago, but had been to all intents lost, until a quest for it was made by Mrs. Zelia Nuttal, and discovered by her in the library of the Hon. Robert Curzon, Lord Zouche, to whose father it had been presented by the Florentina authorities as a peculiar specimen of picture writing, a subject in which he was profoundly interested.

When our Juniors are tired sewing "patches" and dressing dolls, they might get an idea or two from the amusing little stories Mrs. Alden tells in the Ladies' Home Journal. She says, "Children are so ingenious in finding ways of scattering Sunshine: One little girl, when asked to tell what she had done for Sunshine. One little girl, when asked to tell what she had done for Sunshine: Another one said, "My grandma likes baked potatoes, and she doesn't get 'em very often, for we do our cooking on a gas stove. I found a nice one and roasted it for her, and she said that was Sunshine: Another Junior, somewhere in California says, "I gave a little girl some of my good papers because she had none, and she said she was glad, and so was I."

I wonder if the editor of the Comber Herald thinks he is rewarded for his kind act of last week. He made such kind remarks about the work of the Sunshine Society way be summed up in the following short statement: The gladening of a miserable life, the brightning of a darkened room, and the rollowing short statement: The gladening of a miserable life, the brightning of a darkened room, and the lives of people who are able to supply themselves with all that money can buy. In truth, the whole object of the Sunshine Society may be summed up in the following short statement: The gladening of a miserable life, the brightning of a darkened room, and the lives of people who are able to supply themselves the likely that Sunshine work will soon be taken up in Ridgetown and Hereby and the lives of little children who may not be as happy as others. In fact, anything that is done by Sunshiners is done as a friendly act, to little children who may not be
