man's private life, it may be said that no marriage could possibly have been more happy than that of Mr and Mrs (lidatone. The peir were young together, became mature togather, and grew old together. I do not merely mean to say that they passed their live in the same dwelling, but what I do mean to say is that they were always thoroughly together in purpose and in spirit, in heart and in soul. There naver could have been a wrife more absolutely devoted to her husband and to his cause than Mrs (fladtone. There was something unapeakably touching even to mere and casual observers like myself, in the tender care which abe always lavished upon him a care which advancing years seemed rather to increase than to diminish. One was reminded sometimes of the saying of Burke, that he never had an outside trouble in his life which did not vanish at the sight of his home. Glastons had several children. Two of his sons were at one sime members of the House of Commons, William Henry, the elecst son, has long ince passed out of life. Herbert Clads stone is, I kope and fully believe, destined to carry out the renown of the name.
