CANADA'S AUTUMN

Perhaps in other countries than this Dominion the fall may be a season of sorrow and melancholy, and the falling leaves contain no message but a threnody of summer joys. When winters are damp and desolate, seasons of "goloshes" and umbrellas, of leaden skies and choking fog, autumn comes merely as the harbinger of depression.

Not so in Canada. Our maple leaves do not shrivel and decay under the first touch of cold, instead they don their most magnificent attire, robes of bright scarlet and of richest gold in a thousand shades, to welcome the coming of the king. The air of the Alps on the clearest day is not more bracing than is the atmosphere of Canada's autumn mornings. It is not a time of decay, but of getting out the winter garb. Thousands of animals and millions of insects are scurrying backwards and forwards making provisions for the winter and stocking up the larders with the foods which Nature provides in such abundance.

It is time to slough the enervation which the torrid heat of July induced, and to brace the system for the days to come in the spirit of the Viking. The glorious days of autumn are here, and the great outdoors never beckoned more bewitchingly. The trees, the smell of the earth, the rich glow of the sun make an irresistible appeal.

Respectfully,
CLAS S. FITCH,
Mayor.

THE NEW WOMEN VOTERS

It has been estimated that 1,250,000 women will be on the voters' lists in the coming general election. This large body of women form a new and untried force entering the political life of Canada and adds a further uncertainty to the results of the forthcoming election. Although some women voted in the election of 1917 the franchise extended to them was very restricted and there was practically no issue, the war. Today, there are three parties in the field each with a different policy for meeting the momentous fiscal problems that face the country. Every political faction, is awakening to the realization that the electorate has been increased 50 per cent.

That this new and powerful force will receive the thoughtful consideration of politicians cannot be doubted. It is to early in the campaign to foretell what appeals and promises will be made. Already Premier Meighen has promised that if his government is returned to power that the British North American Act will be so amended that women may be appointed to the Senate. Whether the appeals made to women will be made to sentiment or reason remains yet to be seen. This election will be vastly different from all preceding elections if appeals are not made to prejudice and passion and an attempt made to sweep the people off their feet by party slogans and catchy phrases. These tactics have met with success in the past and are certain to be tried again. They have succeeded with the electorate composed entirely of men and there are those who say that women are even more "creatures of sentiment" and those who hold this view will make use of the tactics that have stood them in good stead in the past.

Alice Robertson, the only woman representative in the United States Congress, has said "The women citizen's quest for facts should be untiring, and she should resist the easy appeal to the emotions which is the stock-in-trade of the propagandist." Thinking Canadian women will second the wish expressed by Hon. T. A. Crerar when speaking of the coming political campaign. "I trust," said Mr. Crerar, "that the contest will be free from appeals to sectional, racial and religious prejudices. The issues facing the people were never more momentous than they are today. These issues must be discussed free from all such appeals if we are to emerge successfully from our difficulties. Patriotism must be placed above partisanship.

Although young in the actual exercise of the franchise, women are not by any means untrained in political thinking and the politician who appeal solely to sentiment will find that he has hurled a boom-crang and has been instrumental in his own destruction. There is one demand that the new woman voter makes of the politician, that he base his argument on reason and that he consider her not as a being set apart from the rest of humanity but as a real and vital factor in our social and economic life.

The new woman voter will do well to make herself acquainted with the existing political parties, their platforms and to weigh the promises made by them in the light of fulfilment of promises in the past before the election takes place, so that no one can say when it is all over that she acted without thinking.—United Farmers' Guide.
