THE CIRCUS.

husiastic temperament. As the art. He has no use for realistic school of art. He has no use for realism. The circus artist probably knows his business. For many, many years he has been drawing pictures of elephants forty feet high tramping their way majestically through scenes of Oriental splendor. Five generations have stood with glaring eyes and open mouths before these great works of the lithographer's art. They have patronized each succeeding circus, and swallowed the rising lump of disappointment occasioned by the discovery that the seventy-five foot giraffe could stand erect in a seven foot cage. One hundred years from now it will be the same.

No man looks at the bill boards after the circus has left town. As he passes by he looks the other way. It is a matter of regret that the circus is so far behind the progress made by the artist and the advance agent. The advance agent is a talented gentleman, with an enthusiastic temperament. As the who make a critical analysis of this spirited sketch. The "La Tascot" on the bill boards is a far prettier female, but her face lacks the decision and character portrayed in the original. Many are disappointed that the dive is not made head first, as per advertisement, but this feeling soon passes away.

The artist has shown Signeor Kelly in the star act of the evening. Signeor Kelly in the star act of the evening. Signeor Kelly is the champion "bear-buck" rider of the world. Those not acquainted with the dangers which surround the life of a circus performer may fall to properly appreciate the risk taken by Signeor Kelly in the feat undertaken by him as shown in the sketch. There is a chance that the upright so firmly grasped by the rider may break or pull out. What would be dashed to the sawdust track. Then, egain, the horse might drop dead. Those not in the business have no right to criticise, but it is hard to keep out of one's mind the recollection of a scene shown on the bill boards, where a flying horse dashes around the great ring, carrying on his back a graceful rider, whose toes seem hardly to touch the galloping steed.

SIGNOR KELLY, THE BEAR-BUCK RIDER. There is no use in kicking because the man who was advartised to turn thirteen times wer twelve large elephants simply jumps off of a springboard and turns a somersault over one solitary, melancholy pachyderm with a far away look in his off eye. Not half of the people in the vast audience would dare to per

The shah of Persia specially appreciated two of the Berlin sights during his visit—the menagerie at the Aquarium and the Zoological gardens. He admired the monkeys, but was rather shy of seeing them at close quarters. However, the manager at the Aquarium induced his Persian majesty to stroke a very tame chimpanzee, when, to the general horror, another monkey, which was not being watched, suddenly clung to the shah's uniform, and damaged both the royal visitor's garments and his nerves.—New York Telegram.

Relative Civilizations.

An interesting table exhibited at the Paris exposition shows the relative civilizations of the several countries from the postoffice standpoint, by showing the number of letters per capita passing through them. Great Britain leads with 40 per head, Australia is next with 30, and Switzerland with 30. The United States, Germany and Holland have 20, and Belgium leads them at 25. The other countries of Europe gradually deseend in the scale till the zero mark is almost reached in Russia, which reports only two letters a year per head.—Chicago Tribune.
