The wisdom of the extension of the road to Montreal has already been demonstrated, from a traffic point of view, and it is his opinion that, assuming the increase in traffic receipts to be maintained, within twelve months the advantages of the extension will be generally recognized by the public.

Give the Soldiers Bath Tubs.

We heartily indorse the proposition made by the surgeon of an Illinois regiment at Camp Alger that the volunteers should be furnished with a supply of bath tubs. The art of war has now paggressed beyond the crude and barbaric stage where soldiers who felt the need of a bath took a rinse in the nearest stream and dried themselves in the sun. And, aside from the sanitary feature of the proposition, it possesses distinct strategical advantages. Every soldier will, of course, carry his bath tub as a part of his equipment, and it is obvious that the spectacle of several thousand American troops,
