SWEATING HIM.-- A young candidate lately presented himself before a certain lately presented himself before a certain tredical acciety for examination, and if ac-cepted was to receive a degree from the society. The censors went on with the examination so far as to find him grokely ignorant. His embarresements and mortifi-cation had thrown him into a violent ewest. In this pickle, one of the censors asked him what course he would take with a patient efficient with the thermatism. He realied afflicted with the rheumatism. He replied. "I would sweat him." "Well," said the "I would sweat him." "Weil, said the censor, " and what method would you take to sweat him ?" The porr fellow, who be-gan to be a little angry on the occasion, replied, I would send him here; I swear to be examined !"
