Out of a Hell
of Slaughter.

"It's worth about nine cents in Canadian money for the bronze there is in it; but—" and the thin, pallid man of 45 passed his hand over his eyes as if to shut out forever the memory of the deed that won him the Victoria Cross, the most highly-prized medal of honor that the British Empire can bestow.

Even in these times that try men's souls and determine whether they be of gold or of baser metal, this man, John Howard Trynor, on whose blouse none other than King George V. pinned the bronze "V.C." stands pre-eminently a hero. There may be others, but none has reached these shores yet with an experience that equals his, and with a V.C.

You see, Trynor had done a good bit of fighting before he won his cross, had been wounded half a dozen times, been in the hospital two or three times, and performed feats of devilish daring. He was out of the hospital only two days when "that Wipers (Ypres) thing happened." Ypres is called Wipers by the British soldiers. It was at Ypres that Trynor won the Victoria Cross—a cheap-looking bronze medal with a purple ribbon on which is inscribed the magic words: "For valor."

"That Wipers thing" was only carrying 11 men out of the crater left by a German shell in the region between the trenches while the action at Ypres was hottest.

"I can hardly realize that I went through it," says Trynor. "I was doing engineering work at that time, sapping and mining, tunneling under to get into the German trenches, about 250 yards away. There are always 12 men who go together in this work."

"We were about half way across 'No Man's Land' when a big, high explosive shell from one of the German batteries fell short and exploded directly over the end of our sap. It left a hole as big as a house, and in an instant we were all tangled up and left exposed to the German rifle fire at the opposite trench.

"I was the only man in the party who could walk. The rest were knocked out. My left arm was badly hurt, but somehow I managed to get me of the fellows up on my back and lag him into our trenches.

"When I got to the trench I thought about the 10 other poor devils I had left behind me. They were helpless under the fire of the German rifles. So I started back and got a second one. When I got in I found he had been killed right there on my back.

"Well, to make a long story short, I brought in all the other fellows, and one more of them got his death while I was carrying him out. The Germans got me, too, six times, but I lived through it—and when I got out of the hospital in London this is what they gave me, the V.C."

"That Wipers thing," sufficient as it was to secure him his V.C., consisted but a small fragment of the thrilling experience of John Howard Trynor, who is trying to get back his nerve in Boston so he can return to the struggle. He is a New Brunswicker, born under the British flag, who early came to Rockland, Maine, to live. But blood is thicker than water. He saw the cloud gathering long before the war broke and was in England when the hour struck.

Enlisting in the Eleventh Battalion of the famous Black Watch, he participated in the battles of Mons, Marne, Neuve Chapelle, The Loos, Hill 60 and Ypres, was in the hospital five times, and now bears upon his body the marks of shrapnel wounds in the head (in which a silver plate three inches square now replaces the bones removed), a bullet wound in the shoulder, two through the lungs, two in the stomach, two in his knee, and through his instep, and he has lost the tip of one finger where a bit of shell struck it.

This man is the sole survivor of his original battalion of the Black Watch and is one of three survivors out of 7,000 men killed on the field.

"Out of 62,000 men engaged, we lost 25,000 in the charge at Hill 60," he says.

"But the worst of all was the gas. That's what gets you," he says. "It got it good at The Loos, through a leaky helmet—lost my memory, lost my nerve, lost my health. The bullets and shrapnel wounds are nothing compared to the effect of the gas."

Trynor is now 45 years old and looks all shot to pieces. His wounds have healed, but he still finds it necessary to stop and think hard in order to recall the names of even his dearest relatives and friends—so deadly is the effect of the gas used by the Germans.

At Hill 60 Trynor was in the thick of the fight and was the only survivor of the company. In the last charge against the German lines the British lost 20,000 men.

The Farewell Letter of Patrick Pearse

The President of the "Irish Republic" Had no Valn Regrets to Impart to His Mother.

London, May 27.—The Evening Star prints a farewell letter that Patrick Pearse, president of the short-lived Irish Republic, wrote to his mother, on the eve of his execution. It is dated Kilmalham Prison, May 3, and is as follows:

"My Dearest Mother,—I have been hoping up to now it would be possible to see you again, but it does not seem possible. Good-bye, dear, dear mother. Through you I say goodbye to Wow Wow (a sister), Mary, Bridget, Willie, Miss B. Mical, Cousin Maggie and everyone at St. Edna's. I hope and believe Willie and the St. Edna's boys will be all safe."

"I have written two papers about financial affairs, and one about my books, which I want you to get. With them are a few poems in MS. In my bookcase. You asked me to write a little poem which would seem to be said by you about me. I have written it, and a copy is in Arthur Hill Barracks, with other papers."

"I just received Holy Communion. I am happy, except for the great grief of parting from you. This is the death I should have asked for if God had given me the choice of all deaths—to die a soldier's death for Ireland and for freedom. We have done right. People will say hard things of us now, but later on will praise us. Do not grieve for all this, but think of it as a sacrifice which God asked of me and of you."

"Good-bye again, dear mother. May God bless you for your great love for me and for your faith, and may He remember all you have so bravely suffered. I hope soon to see papa, and in a little while we shall all be together again. I have no words to tell you of my love for you and how my heart yearns to you all. I will call to you in my heart at the last moment."

Feasibility of Submarine Service

Between Germany and the United States.

London Sees no Reason Why It Should Not be Attempted—Prince Von Buelow May Come Over in Undersea Boat on Mission to the United States.

New York, June 1.—A cable to the Sun from London says:—"The feasibility of a German submarine merchant fleet is not discounted in naval circles here. On the contrary, there is believed to be no reason why it should not be attempted. It is even suggested that Prince Von Buelow, if he desires to go upon a mission to the United States as rumored recently, may cross the Atlantic in a submarine, which would achieve a spectacular effect."

There is a report that a trans-Atlantic submarine has been built at Stettin and that it will shortly proceed on a sea voyage to Hamburg. The report is not discredited here. The estimated length of the boat is 450 feet and the craft is said to be able to remain at sea for 20 days without touching port.

Naval authorities regard this as possible, as a British submarine went forty-eight days without touching port. Moving all the time. The question as to what status such a submarine merchant fleet would have, is speculative, but it is thought here that there is no reason why such boats could not be registered as merchantmen and enjoy the same privileges."

Your Boys and Girls.

Avoid from babyhood giving children "tastes" of all kinds of foods suitable for "grown-ups." Exclude from their diet coffee and tea, for they will learn to depend on the stimulants rather than foods. Use milk in which cocoa shells or ribs have been boiled for flavor.

Exclude from children's diets made-over dishes that are combined with much fat, also rich sauces, pastry, and fritters—in fact, fried foods of any kind.

A certain amount of fat is good, but is best in form of olive oil, cream, top milk, crisp bacon and butter. Heating fat and cooking it with other foods makes it much harder to digest.

Unfair Attacks Against Ministry.

New York Times from Paris says:—"Premier Briand's ready acceptance in principle of a secret session whereof the mere threat was sufficient to overthrow Viviani—has taken the wind from his opponent's sails. It is probable that if a secret session is held, it will be devoid of sensation, as in England. The position of the cabinet is greatly strengthened, but intrigues continue, especially by certain groups directing attacks against those responsible for the prosecution of military operations, with a view to discrediting the government indirectly."

Measles.

Hundreds of children are suffering from "measles" at the present time, and one has to be very careful in trying to avoid the complications that often follow them.

A heavy "cough" is very prevalent during the present epidemic, and "Pneumonia" is the great danger. Avoid this by keeping a bottle of "Stafford's Phoratoxine Cough Cure" on hand.

Stafford's Drug Store (Theatre Hill) is open every night from 7.30 to 9.30. The above preparation is manufactured only by DR. F. STAFFORD & SON, St. John's, Nfld.

To Save Eyes

Thousands of people suffer from eye troubles because they do not know what to do. They know some good home remedy for every other minor ailment, but none for their eye troubles. They neglect their eyes, because the trouble is not sufficient to drive them to an eye specialist, who would, anyway, charge them a heavy fee. As a last resort they go to an optician or to the five and ten-cent store, and oftentimes get glasses that they do not need, or which, after being used a few months, do their eyes more injury than good.

There is a simple prescription that every eye should use: 5 grains Non-Opto dissolved in 1/2 glass of water. Use three or four times a day to bathe the eyes. This prescription and the simple Non-Opto system keeps the eyes clean, sharpens the vision and quickly overcomes inflammation and irritation; weak, watery, overworked, tired eyes and other similar troubles are greatly benefited and oftentimes cured by its use. Many reports show that wearers of glasses have discarded them after a few weeks' use. It is good for the eyes, and contains no ingredient which would injure the most sensitive eyes of an infant or the aged. Your own druggist can fill this prescription, or the Valman Drug Co. of Toronto will fill it for you by mail. Try it, and know for once what real eye comfort is.

Non-Opto City Pharmacy to whom the above article was submitted, said: "Non-Opto is a very remarkable remedy. Its constituent ingredients have been used for a long time to relieve eye troubles and are of proven value. It can be used and continued as long as needed and is one of the best for regular use in almost every family." Price on hand.

German Food Situation Growing Worse.

The Berliner Tageblatt Tells of the Wild Rioting on the Streets—"The Battle of Stews."

New York, June 1.—A London despatch to the Sun says:—"Investigation of reports on the actual food situation in Germany reveals the fact that conditions are becoming worse daily. The food situation is threatening to become the most important factor of the great war. A perusal of the German newspapers discloses a wealth of occurrences revealing the real conditions. Complaints are heard everywhere over the difficulty of obtaining supplies, which are constantly dwindling."

The news of the arrival of traveling soup kitchens circulated in Berlin was the occasion of wild rioting, which the Berliner Tageblatt reports as follows:—"An attempt by the Charlottenberg authorities to relieve the general distress by a distribution, through perambulating kitchens containing meals of pork, peas and potatoes, ended in an utter fiasco. Each kitchen contained four hundred pints of stew. A few minutes after the kitchens arrived the neighboring streets were thronged by thousands eager to secure a share."

"Drivers and attendants were helpless in the face of the mob of thousands of shrieking men, women and children, demanding the steaming stew with pots, crockery, kitchenware of every description and even with bare hands."

"Hundreds of old men and women, as well as many children, were knocked down and trampled upon. Their cries of distress and pain were heard on all sides. The 'battle of stews' was soon over. Within a quarter of an hour the only evidences of fighting were broken parts of kitchen vans, smashed crockery and shreds of clothing littering the roadway."

"The authorities now announce that the affair was an experiment and that it will not be repeated. But this is a pity. They did not adopt any precautions which might have prevented the scandalous scenes instead of causing still further suffering to the people."

Fatal Food Riots Occur in Germany.

Women Fight for Meat at Frankfurt and they Shout Aloud, "Down With the Emperor."

London, May 26.—An Amsterdam despatch to the Exchange Telegraph Company says that eighteen women were wounded in a fight between police and food rioters at Frankfurt-on-the-Main, Wednesday night, according to a despatch received at The Hague.

The riot is said to have started owing to a shortage of meat in the local butcher shops. Three hundred and fifty women, who had been told there was no meat for them, marched through the streets carrying black famine flags and singing Socialist songs.

The women forced their way into one butcher shop, although it was guarded by soldiers and policemen. After a search, they found some meat, which they cut up, and continued their march, holding the pieces above their heads.

Police attempted to take the meat from the women, and a general fight followed, in which the officers used their swords. One woman was arrested for shouting, "Down with the Emperor."

Peppina Caused Riots at Theatre.

Police Called to Handle Crowds When Mary Pickford Appeared in Famous Picture.

Reserves from two police precincts were called to handle the crowds which stormed the Broadway theatre, New York, in their efforts to see Mary Pickford in the longest picture in which she has ever starred, "Poor Little Peppina," according to Manager Langfeldt, the former record for the house was held by Geraldine Farrar in "Temptation," but on the opening day, Sunday, February 20th, the record established by the prima donna was decisively eclipsed by Mary Pickford and the same held true for Monday.

On Tuesday and Wednesday the mob which stormed the theatre in ever increasing numbers made it necessary for Manager Langfeldt to call for the assistance of the police. One hour after the first contingent of reserves had arrived on Tuesday in response to the management's appeal, another squad was dispatched to their assistance as they were unable to cope with the situation.

Primate of England.

Had Narrow Escape While Visiting British Forces in France.

London, May 21.—The Morning Post correspondent writes from France:—"While the Archbishop of Canterbury was on a recent visit to the British expeditionary force in France he had an experience of a certain liveliness such as does not usually fall to the lot of non-combatants. Soon after his arrival the motor car in which he travelled went badly wrong. The front wheels ran away on their own course, while the car sat upon its back wheels. When His Grace was approaching a certain place he was preceded by an enemy aeroplane, which dropped bombs for several minutes. By way of celebrating the occasion, finally, when the Archbishop's trenches, he suddenly found himself in the midst of a heavy bombardment. The Germans had chosen that moment for turning their guns on this particular part of the line, and for half an hour or so the Primate of All England had a very real taste of what it is like to be shelled in the trenches."

Ball Games Commence

To-morrow night week the football season will open when the first game will be played on St. George's Field. The opposing teams are not yet set down as the fixtures will not be drawn for a day or two.

Next Wednesday afternoon the Cubs and B. I. S. will clash in the first baseball game for the season. The entire proceeds will be for the Soldiers' and Sailors' Fund.

June Days.

"O, what is so smooth as a day in June? Then, if ever, are flossy days!" So the Poet sang, with his lyre in tune, and the subject deserved his day in June is the silkiest thing that ever the gods designed, and the man who doesn't then smile and sing has barnacles on his mind. Then the coltkins play and the catkins romp, and gamboing are the lambs, and the bullfrogs toot in the lonely swamp, all happy as pickled clams. Then the grass is green and the skies are blue, as blue as the laws allow, and the blossoms gleam in the morning dew like gems on a damsel's brow. Man's bosom throbs with abounding life, he ceases to fear and fret, and he remarks to his smiling wife, "This world is the one best bet." It is the time of the blushing bride, the time of the graduate; and man, he ceases his grouch aside, and sees that his snail's on the straight.
