

The Newspaper of
To-day And What It Is.

Address by Arthur Brisbane at
The Commonwealth Club of San Francisco.

Kinds of newspapers are important. One is well illustrated by the little monkeys that you see in stores. One monkey has his mouth open; he will speak no evil. The third, holding his ears, will hear no evil. The curious monkey newspapers often speak or hear evil are appreciated by great corporations and others that are diligently doing all the people all the time. These little journalistic monkeys are still have some reward in some form, although they are usually not successful.

Real Newspapers.

Another kind of newspaper is the newspaper. Such newspapers tell the eyes open to see what is in their ears open to hear it. They do not hesitate to open their mouths, that the people may know.

Newspapers today are what they always were—a mirror of the life, civilization that surrounds us. They are the mirror of the life, civilization that surrounds us.

The world's great problem is distribution of the earth's products through industry and business, of water through irrigation, and of knowledge through books, and especially through newspapers.

The newspaper can distribute knowledge, the rain distributes water, in small drops, easily absorbed.

Take a cubic yard of water from a lake and drop it on your gardens; it will wash away the soil; kill the plants. Take a heavy volume from the library and drop it on the ordinary man's head; it will stun him; teach him nothing.

Scatter the water over the soil, a drop at a time; scatter knowledge among human beings a few words at a time, through many millions of newspapers. That is a way to spread water and to spread knowledge.

Criticism of Press.

There is some wise and much foolish criticism of newspapers, their sensationalism, of big type. That has no importance. The wise criticism does good, the other doesn't count.

You must do what is necessary to plant in the brain to which you appeal the facts that you want to distribute. A wise Catholic priest said to a Protestant brother who was going among savages as a missionary, "My friend, you will find it hard to impress those people if you go among them in a straw hat and a tassel duster."

A newspaper is the voice of a missionary, MUST COMMAND ATTENTION.

In days when big type, and especially red type, filled many good souls with horror, I was asked in New York to address a gathering of Presbyterian clergymen. I told them I followed the example of the Divine editor in editing the Evening Journal, then considered sensational by those that did not understand. I said to them, "See how now the sky is edified, to impress men."

There are the big black clouds to frighten and move them. That is our big black type. There is the flashing lightning, appearing at intervals, that is our red type.

And when the storm is over, there is the beautiful rainbow. That is our Sunday colored supplement.

Newspapers are what the people make them, they are subject at all times to the initiative, referendum, and recall. Any newspaper can be eliminated in twenty-four hours if the people wish it.

Don't buy the paper—that will settle it. Anybody that wants to do it may start a newspaper.

Any newspaper can be told immediately, by the dropping of its circulation, that it is not pleasing to the public.

A newspaper is a mirror; the community looking into it sees itself—From "Circulation."

Altogether, Boys!

Editor Evening Telegram.

Dear Sir.—I wish to join in the appeal, for another splendid collection next Sunday as a free will offering to our dear old friends and teachers the Christian Brothers of St. John's. We who were privileged to receive our education from the members of this noble order of teachers must never forget that the rewards we have given them have never been commensurate with the value of all they have deserved. But we can to some extent repay them for all their labors and unflinching efforts on our behalf and this by means of the annual collection which occurs again on Sunday next.

Now then altogether boys for another great collection next Sunday, one that will be worthy of us all, whose proudest boast is always that we are Ex-pupils of the Christian Brothers School.

Yours truly,
EX-PUPIL.
