The Coming Session.

The Legislature opens to-day under circumstances which, if somewhat unusual, in that it is the second time within three months that the event has hanpened, are none the less propitious. All the signs point to an era of prosperity, and the return of the Government by such a large majority is the outward and visible sign that the country is determined that the turn of the tide shall be taken full advantage of.

The staple industry gives every indication of energetic prosecution, and with the markets abroad favourable, the chances of a successful season may be anticipated.

Our pulp and paper activities are in full swing, and from all accounts it will not be long before other operations of a similar kind will be undertaken, Falls plant and the work on the Humber progressing favourably, the Railway seems to have taken on a new lease of life and gives promise of becoming an asset instead of a liability.
