"I've been a little fearful of it myself, Stella," he replied, gravely; but I do not know as we can prevent it."

"We must prevent it, "replied his sister, firmly. "We must do our duty, Robert; it would not be right to allow that dear child to become entangled in a love affair while she is away from her mother. I should never forgive myself, and she would never forgive myself, and she would never forgive us, if any harm should befall her while she is in our care."

Miss Knight appeared to be satisfied with this decision of her brother, and dropped the subject.

The party was at San Jose when this conversation occurred. They were to remain several days in the beautiful city, making it their headquarters also while visiting points of interest in its vicinity, and Mr. Abbott resolved to make a bold stroke at once at the disagreeable task that his sister had imposed on him, and have the matter off his mind.

As they were leaving the table of the Anjerais House after dinner that evening he slipped his arm within Rupert's in a confidential way and said, with a genial smile: "Mr. Hamilton. I am going out for a little quiet stroil about the city; will you come with me?"

Rupert had been meditating a cozy teteatewith Virgie on the verands, while the band discoursed sweet music on the stand near by, but he was too well bred and unselfish to refuse an old gentleman's request, and unhesitatingly responded:

"Thank you, sir, I shall be happy to accompany you."

When they were in the street Mr. Knight turned his steps toward the park near by, and, after, walking up and down its beautiful avenues for a while, he seated himself upon a rustic bench motioned his companion to sit beside him.

Then he turned frankly to him, and, speaking with great kindness, said;

"My young friend, it has always been my practice, when I had any disagreeable duty to perform, to adopt the most straightforward course, and, as I have something on my heart which I wish to say to you, I trust that you will pardon me if I speak out freely."

Rupert Hamilton's heart, gave one tremendous bound at these words, and he cast

Mrs. Wm. Irvine, of St. John, N. B., in having her testimonial published, does it with the grand object of benefitting thousands who are now suffering all over this broad Dominion. Mrs. Irvine says:

"I think it a great pleasure as well as a duty to put on record what Paine's Celery Compound has done for me. I have been troubled for the last ten years with kidney complaint, and have tried a great many preparations and doctors' prescriptions, but with little or no benefit.

"For the last six months I have had a great strain upon my system from nightwatching and overwork. I was breaking down; my friends said, 'I was going fast to death.' I resolved to try your Paine's Celery Compound, and used four bottles. My kidney trouble disappeared; nervousness and sleeplessness are troubles of the past, and my general health is greatly improved. In a word, I am cured; and I wish you to publish this so that the world can read it. Yours in sincerity,

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

CHICAGO, Feb. 10.—There are stored in the custom service warehouse many curious articles which will be transferred to the ethnological building as soon as that structure has been completed. One collection is from the Indians inhabiting the region in British Columbia far to the west of Winnipeg. It includes two cances, a totem pole and the material for a house some 25 feet square. One of the cances is a large affair with a high prow. The tree from which it was cut must have been a veritable monarch. No fewer than 40 people could fidd in the cance. The other one is of curious shape but much smaller. The totem pole was a sort of family tree of an Indian aristocrat. A face was carved in the pole for every generation. The pole is 24 feet long, and this particular family was an old one when Columbus made the trip which proved so disastrous to the red man.

There are many antiquities for the Latin-American section, sent forward by W. E. Curtis. Among the lot are some Peruvian mummies. There are many cances and two cannons with a history, probably, but what it is the customs inspectors do not know. In one corner of the warehouse is a consignment of 24 packages of Yugus bark, 13 packages of paim board and a bundle of cane. Next spring the board, the bark and the cane will be the result.

The machinery hall is just now the most interesting and active place on the grounds. Large forces of men are at work there putting in foundations for the big engines that will furnish the power. No exhibits for that department, however, have arrived as yet, and only a small portion of the machinery, but the manufacturers are ready to ship as soon as they know that the building is completed and the foundation in place.

Work was begun to-day on the two cocoa buildings, which will form a part of the personally, and society has followed royalty's lead. Most of the exhibits are being collected in London preparatory to shipment, and great crowds attend the preliminary exhibitions, indicating the popular interest in the fair. The most recent display of this kind was made by the Royal School of Art Needlework, and the English papers are full of decriptions lauding the beauty of the exhibit.

Needlework, and the English papers are full of decriptions lauding the beauty of the exhibit.

It is said that half the people one meets in England seem bent on traveling westward the coming summer. The specimens that will be sent are sure to be greatly admired. One is a very handsome screen in the Louis XVI. style, with a frame of rich gilding, the upper part filled in with plate glass and the panels with pale reseda satin, each with a different "trophy," as it was called in those days, of musical instruments wreated with flowers. This occupies the center of each panel, so that there is plenty of margin for displaying the beauty of the satin, the tone of which is lovely. There is a table cover in pale blue satin, embroidered with clusters of black grapes and pomegranates, with beautifully drawn leaves. A piano cover in similar satin is embroidered in a Japanese floral design, the flowers being treated in the now well-known Japanese way, with every petal spread out to the fullest, and a few sprays made to curve about and embellish much space without filling it, a far more effective style than the overcrowing to which we, nationally, are rather prone. Two lovely cushious are also among, the exhibits, ineffably soft and liberally large, the ground in satin embroidered with flowers, and the design copied from antique Italian needlework. A sweet little footstool, in green velvet on a gilt mount, is embroidered in a graceful floral design, the leaves and petals being in white linen applique on the velvet and outlined with gold braid. The needlework display of the English ladies promises to those who admire that art, of any on the grounds.

A children's nursery has been provided for, so that the mothers may bring their little ones, if over one year old, to the fair, and if they desire, can leave them at the nursery in the care of a faithful and experienced nurse, receive a check, and go about the grounds and feel that their babies are well and properly cared for. The charge for caring for the youthful fair visitors has not been fixed, but will be merely nominal, between 10 and 25 cents a day, covering only the cost of milk and bread given them.

Morning concerts of popular music and free to the public are to be given by the Thomas orchestra nearly every day the fair is open. The performances are to be given in the beautiful music hall situated on the lake shore near the south and of the manufactures building. No efficial announcement has been made of the plan for concerts, the bureau of music preferring to defer its publication until the details are complete. According to one of the great conductor's personal friends, Mr. Thomas urged the free concerts as one of the most important features of the plan. He saw in it an opportunity to reach the plain people and teach them the beauty of good music rendered by a magnificent orchestra. The lovers of classical music could gratify their tastes at the concerts prepared especially for them, but the free performances were to include renditions of such music as the Strauss waltzes and the Rubenstein ballet music. stein ballet music.

Nervine Tonic.

NERVOUS DISEASES.

As a cure for every class of Zervous Diseases, no remedy has been able to compare with the Nervine Tonic, which is very pleasant and harmless in all its effects upon the youngest child or the oldest and most delicate individual. Nine tenths of all the ailments to which the human family is heir are dependent on nervous exhaustion and impaired digestion. When there is an insufficient supply of nerve food in the blood, a general state of debility of the brain, spinal marrow, and nerves is the result. Starved nerves, like starved muscles, become strong when the right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all right kind of food is supplied; and a thousand weaknesses and ailments disappear as the nerves recover. As the nervous system must supply all the power by which the vital forces of the body are carried on, it is the first to suffer for want of perfect nutrition. Ordinary food does not contain a sufficient quantity of the kind of nutriment necessary to repair the wear our present mode of living and labor imposes upon the nerves. For this reason it becomes necessary that a nerve food be supplied. This South American Nervine has been found by analysis to contain the essential elements out of which nerve tissue is formed. This accounts for its universal adaptability to the cure of all forms of nervous derangement.
