Fatal Fight Over a Base Ball Game.

Buffalo, N. Y., June 30.—Edward Vogel and Andrew Scheeler had a dispute about a base ball game which Scheeler had umpired yesterday afternoon. About 7.30 o'clock this evening the two agreed to settle the argument with their fists. They went out into the street and began a very lively fight, which was terminated when Vogel struck Scheeler heavily in the neck, Scheeler falling into the arms of a friend unconscious, and twenty minutes later was dead. His neck was broken by the blow, he escaped, and later he surrendered. He was 19 years old and six feet one inch tall. Vogel is 22. Both men were Irish.

Fosso's cries brought the assailants relinquished their escape, but were subsequently after a most exciting experience.

Baker's Awful Crime.

Albany, N. Y., July 2.—Mrs. Baker, 23 years old, who murdered four children at Montgomery on Monday morning, has become somewhat calmer since her confinement in jail here, and relates additional details of the events which led up to the horrible crime. She protests her utter unconsciousness of the details of the crime, affirming that she was under the influence of morphine she had taken to kill herself. Her maiden name was Lotie Plum. She was born of French-Canadian parents.

Mr. John Anderson, Grassmere, Ont., writes: "The Vegetable Discovery you sent me is all gone, and I am glad to say that it has greatly benefited those who have used it. One man in particular says it has made him a new man, and he cannot say too much for its cleansing and curative qualities."

THE TALK OF LONDON.

Indications of a Change in the Government Programme.

PROROGATION NOW OUT OF SIGHT.

Additional Measures to be Pushed Through This Session.

THE COMMONS AND THE PEERS.

Lord Roseberry's Last Words with the Anti-Gambling League—the Colonies and the Death Duties—Effects of the Anarchist Scare—The Canadian Cattle Question—The Final Retirement of Mr. Gladstone.

London, July 2.—The Government, encouraged by the increase of their majorities in the recent divisions in the House of Commons, now intimate their intention to include in the business of the present session several bills which it has been semi-officially announced would be abandoned. This programme will add a number of important measures to those which the Government are already pledged to put through before the close of the session, namely, the Evicted Tenants' Bill, the Miners' Eight-hour Bill, the Registration Bill and the London Equalization of Rights Bill, which bills will be expedited as much as possible. This change of position implies a prolonged session. All idea of the prorogation of Parliament in August is now out of the question. The House will certainly sit until September, and possibly later. What is more important still is the fact that the Ministers now believe that they are strong enough, in view of their recent big majorities, to postpone dissolution until the autumn of 1895, and also think themselves in a position to justify them in endeavoring at the next session of Parliament to carry out the complete Newcastle programme. The Opposition seem enfeebled through sheer weariness of the members of their party in fighting a continuous losing battle. The leaders of the Opposition accuse their whips of incompetent handling of their men, and especially in their permitting the Government to obtain through a snatch division a big majority on the spirit duties clauses. In this case the Opposition were undoubtedly taken by surprise. The whips could not, for lack of time, summon their men together when the division was called, so it has been settled that the merits of the question shall be tested again by a motion that the spirit duties clauses be recommitted for discussion. The Government readily gave their assent to this proposition without the slightest fear as to the result, and they are further trying to make an arrangement with the Unionist leaders to recast the Evicted Tenants' Bill so as to curtail the debates on that measure. With this view Mr. John Morley, Chief Secretary for Ireland, has refrained from bringing it to three clauses. Mr. Chamberlain, Mr. Thomas W. Russell and several other Unionists have accepted the compromise, and this fact makes it possible that the Evicted Tenants' Bill may even be successful in passing the House of Lords.

PEERS' HEIRS IN THE COMMONS.

A committee has been appointed to consider the position of heirs to peerages sitting in the House of Commons. The question has been raised by the case of Hon. Bernard Coleridge, M. P. for Attercliffe division of Sheffield, who by the death of his father, Lord Chief Justice Coleridge, becomes the second Baron Coleridge. The Government have silently attempted an innovation by proposing that Bernard Coleridge apply for the stewardship of the Chiltern Hundreds, making it appear that he voluntarily retired to the House of Commons. Mr. Chamberlain, in the committee, showed that if Parliament should permit such a proceeding it would be a formal negation of the principle that accession to the peerage was an ipso facto vacation of a seat in the House of Commons. Sir Wm. Harcourt contended that until the Crown, under a writ of summons, called a man to the Upper House, he did not lose his right to sit in the House of Commons. Lord Wolmer called attention to the fact that Carmichael, the heir to the dormant peerage of Hyndford, retained his seat in the House of Commons without challenge. A curious issue of the debate is the fact that the legality of a peer sitting in the House of Commons until he is called to the House of Lords has been established. Hon. Wm. St. John F. Broderick, M. P.; Hon. George Nathaniel Curzon and Viscount Wolmer, M. P., all heirs to peerages, claim that the principle laid down in their contention that it is optional with a peer whether or not he shall sit in the House of Lords has obtained Parliamentary recognition.

ROSEBERRY AND THE ANTI GAMBLERS.

Lord Roseberry's latest correspondence with the Anti-gambling League has stirred up a veritable hornet's nest among the unco guild, and the Premier has positively declined to discuss the matter further. His remark in his letter to the Secretary of the League yesterday that Cromwell and his colleagues, after considerable research the scribe of the League reslitted with the report that there was no record that Cromwell was associated with betting men. This assertion, however, failed to provoke a reply from Lord Roseberry, who has given everybody to understand that discussion of the question is closed.

THE COLONIES AND THE DEATH DUTIES.

The representatives of the colonies in London are very much dissatisfied with the clause in the budget bill maintaining the imposition of death duties in the colonies, and have served notice upon Sir William Harcourt that the proposal will not be acceptable to the colonies in any form. Sir George Baden-Powell has given notice of his intention to move in the House that Parliament does not possess the privilege of interfering with the right of colonies to impose their own taxation.

THE ANARCHIST SCARE

which has become intense and widespread since the murder of President Carnot, seriously marred the splendor of the royal pageant on the occasion of the opening of the Tower bridge to-day. The Princess of Wales and the other royal personages were driven through the city by the most direct route and in the quickest time possible, and were guarded by an unusual number of troops, which completely surrounded them. Their return trip up the river was also stripped of much of its dignity and splendor by the hurry which characterized it. So much precaution was taken by the authorities that they refused to divulge to the members of the press the point at which the Prince and Princess of Wales would land from the steamer, vaguely indicating that they would land somewhere in the vicinity of the House of Lords." Within the last week the detective force of Scotland Yard has been increased by one-third. The additional assistance has been largely drafted from the continent with a view of watching foreigners at British ports, and also to note the arrival of fugitive anarchists from Belgium and France, who are coming to England in considerable numbers. A strong guard has been detailed to protect the Czarewitch and the Austrian Archduke during the remainder of their stay in London. The functions which have been arranged in honor of the Archduke include a state ball and banquet and fetes at Buckingham Palace and Marlborough House.

THE CZAREWITCH

continues his quiet going and coming between London and Windsor daily, but every day's programme of his movements is kept secret. It is known that he formally signed, at Windsor, on Tuesday, in the presence of the Queen, the Prince of Wales and the Duke of Saxe-Coburg, the documents necessary to his marriage, Princess Alix, his fiancée, is daily receiving instructions in the doctrines of the orthodox Greek Church, being tutored by the Czar's own confessor.

CANADIAN CATTLE.

The eminent Scotch agriculturist, Andrew Hutchison, after having interviews with Mr. Herbert Gardner, President of the Board of Agriculture, Rt. Hon. Henry Chaplin, M. P., and Sir Charles Tupper, Canadian High Commissioner, has reached the conclusion that the removal of the embargo on Canadian cattle is still distant. The special examinations of the lungs of slaughtered Canadian cattle ceased to-day. The report of the veterinary experts will undoubtedly declare the presence of contagious pleuropneumonia.

THE "GRAND OLD MAN."

The announcement that Mr. Gladstone will never again stand for Midlothian, or for any other constituency, has been allowed to pass almost unnoticed by those who, till the other day, were his followers and his most obedient servants. The Radical, and even the Gladstonian, press in London is silent, or almost silent. You must go to the Conservative papers for anything like due recognition of the solemnity of such an event. In truth, it reaches the close, not only of a great—perhaps the greatest—Parliamentary career, but of an era. Mr. Gladstone may or may not reappear in the House while this Parliament lasts. It is not supposed he will. It is certain he will never appear in another. His withdrawal is infinitely pathetic, and silent. Must we suppose that the Radicals would view his retirement with dismay? They seem to think—and from their own point of view they are probably right—that a great moderating and conservative force has been removed. They are emancipated from an authority they dared not resist. The brake is taken off and the machine is now to run at full speed down the steep bank. But the great leader of a once great party deserved better treatment than this.

NOTES.

The Duchess of York and her baby will go from White Lodge to Sandringham House about the end of July, in obedience to the special desire of the Princess of Wales that the Duchess pass her period of convalescence there. Lord Randolph Churchill's doctor has advised him to retire from public life until his health is fully restored and the Conservatives of Bradford are consequently looking out for another candidate. Mr. Gladstone sent an especially kind message to Lord Randolph on the occasion of his sailing for America.

At the auction sale of the Queen's stud at Hampton Court to-day, 25 yearlings, brought £5,991, and 45 brood mares and foals fetched £18,934. Baron de Hirsch gave £4,880 for the mare Wedlock.

WILL BE TRIED FOR MURDER.

Edward Bowers Will Have to Answer for Shooting Wm. Cain—Cain's Death.

Wm. Cain, the young man who was shot by Edward Bowers in Biddulph Township on Friday, June 22nd, died somewhat suddenly on Sunday about midnight. The result of his death is that Bowers will have to answer to the charge of murder. Cain's death was not expected. During last week he was reported to be on the mend, but on Saturday he took a bad turn. Sunday his condition was easier, and when his medical attendant left him fifteen minutes before his death recovery seemed quite possible. He was noticed to breathe heavily for a minute or two, and then fell back dead.

Crown Attorney Macece was notified yesterday, and ordered that an inquest be held. Bowers was greatly disturbed when he heard the news. He is lying in the County Jail here.

THE STRIKE IN LONDON.

It Still Continues to Influence Travel Here—Only Local Trains Running.

The great Pullman boycott continues to be noticeable in this city, by reason of the manner in which travel over the G. T. R. east is affected. Not a single through train has passed through London from the west since Saturday night. Yesterday, as on Sunday, the Grand Trunk ran local trains from Sarnia, but traffic is light. Travellers do not venture out on such occasions if they can help themselves. What the result of the strike may be in this city it is impossible to foresee, but the trouble has evidently not come to the worst yet.

A Freight Train Held Up.

Elkhart, Ind., July 1.—Yesterday morning as a fast freight train on the Lake Shore pulled up the grade to New Carlisle a gang of eight men boarded it and proceeded to rob the crew and passengers. Five gold watches and about $75 in money were taken.

Murder and Suicide.

Syracuse, N. Y., July 2.—At 7.45 a. m. Henry Vogler, aged 49 years, shot and instantly killed Wm Stutz, aged 50. Vogler then fired a bullet into his own brain and died two hours later. It is believed Stutz was intimate with Vogler's wife.

THE DOUBLE TRAG.

Additional Information Regarding the Victims—"Bury Me With Harry."

Mr. Shirley, of New York, the American agent of the late Henry H. Thomson, whose death by drowning on Sunday occasioned such interest, telegraphed to Mr. Joseph Hinton, undertaker, yesterday to prepare the remains and he would arrive here this forenoon and arrange for the interment. Whether he will agree to have a double funeral this afternoon at 2.30 is a question which he will decide when he ascertains the circumstances attending the unfortunate affair. It is learned that Maude McKechnie, a younger sister of Belle, who suicided when hearing of her lover's death, found an envelope in the bedroom yesterday morning on which her sister had written the words—"Bury me with Harry." Miss McKechnie's interment has been set for this afternoon at Woodland Cemetery, and it is altogether likely that Mr. Shirley will comply with the last request of the dead girl.

Dr. Weld made a post-mortem examination upon Thomson's body yesterday forenoon, and despatched the stomach and contents to Toronto for analysis. Until the report of Professor Ellis is received it will not be known whether deceased was a victim of suicide or met his death by drowning while in a fit. It is understood that the medical examination revealed an exceedingly well preserved man, whose organs were in a normal condition throughout.

So many stories are afloat concerning the unfortunate couple's love affairs that it is very difficult to determine which has truth on its side. From friends of the McKechnie family it is learned that Belle was engaged to be married to a young Scotchman named Jarvie while she was visiting with her mother and sister in Scotland. Jarvie accompanied the McKechnies to a summer resort at Millport in Scotland, and while there Jarvie introduced his intended to Harry Thomson, who, as has been stated, was a personal friend of Jarvie's. It was a case of love at first sight, and Belle McKechnie's handsome face and winning address made a deep impression upon Thomson. About a year ago he resolved upon a trip to Australia, and after spending several months there he came via San Francisco to London, where he met Miss McKechnie, and renewed the acquaintanceship which had been so suddenly formed at Millport. His advances were not as warmly received at first as he expected, but his stories of ardent love, coupled with what he could do for her if she would consent to break off the engagement entered into with Jarvie, to say nothing of his wealth and position in Glasgow society, overcame her scruples and she finally consented to "shake" Jarvie and wrote him breaking off the engagement. Thomson then began to entertain her sumptuously, and from that time until Sunday morning their future happiness seemed to be beyond peradventure. He lavished what wealth he had at his disposal upon her, and scarcely a day passed that he did not take his affianced for an airing in the country or a boat ride down the river. Indeed, he is alleged to have promised to Mrs. McKechnie that he would settle $25,000 upon her daughter before the marriage and take care that her mother was properly cared for. It was also decided that after the marriage the young couple should spend the first five years in Scotland, and at the end of that time return to London and spend the remainder of their days here, which Thomson averred was one of the prettiest spots he had ever looked upon.

At one time it was given out that Thomson was one of five brothers engaged in the steamship business, and on other occasions it was told around that he had only one brother and owned a half interest in several steamships. Which of these statements is the correct one it is difficult to say. It is known, however, that his mother is a widow.
