a fine frenzy over an extract which we published from the Canadian Journal of Com merce, that contained a harmless allusion to the "flirtations" of some leading Liberals with the neighboring republic. In order to show the depth and fierceness of its indignation, it reproduces some of the Liberal campaign literature that has done duty in nearly every election campaign for the last forty years or so. The fury of our contemporary is suspicious and shows that it has been touched on a tender spot. The "flirtations" alluded to are notorious. leading Liberals looked to Washington for inspiration, and when some of them were so States that they gave Senators and others points how to cinch Canadians in order to compel them to accede to the terms which the United States were prepared to offer. is it since leading Liberals were willing to accept commercial union with the United States, one condition of which was that Canada should adopt the ultra protective tariff of the States and another, kept in the background, that it should be succeeded by political union as soon as the times were United States on the same terms, ac- their information at second-hand. The indignation of our contemporary when the flirtations of leading Liberals with the United States are mentioned is easily seen through and deceives

A MOST IMPORTANT SUBJECT.

It is every day becoming clearer and learer that consumption is communicated to human beings by means of the milk of diseased animals. The Connecticut Com-

Incontrovertible observations have established these facts beyond dispute : First, that it (ruberculosis) is a contagious disease; tween the human family and various species of animals. Hence these conclusions follow First, that tuberculosis is a preventable disease; second, as a question of food supply, sound public economy calls for investigation and control by the State; third, as related to the health and lives of the human race, all the claims of philanthropy and self-preservation units in the demand that wise sanitary law should stand with moral as elevating and sustaining a nation, for physical health unites with moral soundness in national power; fourth, these postulater being accepted, it follows that wise and efficient legislation is now demanded, pro-viding sufficient means for the investigation

The subject of the spread of consumption is engaging the attention of the most intelligent farmers of that State. One of them residing in a town called by the good old English name Windsor, writes to a Hartford paper that he became anxious a year ago about the condition of a very fine cow which had a cough. A veterinary surgeon was called in and he decided that the cow had local trouble of the throat, for which he prescribed. A few months later the owner, still anxious, induced the Cattle Commissioners to inspect the cow twice, but they were in doubt as to the nature of her ailment. The owner says :

Finally, I prohibited the use of her milk and concluded to try an experiment of my own. I procured two handsome kittens ent parties and confined them to he milk of this cow for food. For a time they thrived finely. Then they began to cough and wheeze in a most distressing manner, and to grow poor and this, until at the time when they died I do not think they weighed a pound apiece.

The Commissioners then advised him to try the tuberculosis test. The test showed that the cow was diseased. When she was killed it was found that she was badly affeeted. "The only wonder seemed to be," said the owner, " that she lived so long. At the time she was killed she was milking eight quarts a day." He then goes on to

Then having another cow standing by the side of this one, I determined to have her tested, though I did not for a moment suspect ber, never having heard her cough, and she appeared to be in the finest condition. Yet she had to be killed, and no doctor on earth could have told that she had tubercu-losis without the tuberculin test.

Liberals are more conservative on the Labor question than the Tories, and they see that it is evident from this narrative that cows may be far gone in consumption and consumption and consumption and consumption and the public are told not to believe its reports. New York, Feb. 6.—There is no en ouraging news for the many anxious friends of the passengers on board the overdue steamer La Gascogne up to midnight and all kinds of conjectures as to the cause of the delay are indulged in. Among the theories advanced to-night is one that seems plausible. The big White Star steamer Teutonic, which sailed from Queenstown Jan. 31, should have reached here on Tuesday night cogne and, finding her in a disabled condi-tion, is assisting her into port.

The Anchor line steamer Circassia, which sailed from Glasgow on January 25, should not yet arrived, and it is among the possi-bilities that she has fallen in with L₂ Gascogne. No steamers from Europe arrived to-day. The fact remains that La Gascogne is now nearly four days overdue, and news from some point regarding her is hourly expected. Her agents express the utmost confidence in her ultimately turning up safe, if not altogether sound.

The United Press received a cablegram from Bermuda to night to the effect that La Gascogne had not been sighted off that coast. There has been no telegraphic com-munication with Fire Island for 48 hours, NANAIMO. Reb. 6. The entries for the coultry show to be held next week have
