The Parisian papers are filled with matters growing out of the late melancholy death of the Duke of Orleans. The first expressions of grief and regret which they made at the untimely death of the Prince, are giving place to political party. The regency question is at present the most dominant one in

CURE FOR HYDROPHOBIA .- The Austrian government has recently published the following notification upon the em-ployment of a remedy in cases of hydrophobia :--- " Whenever son has been bitten by a dog, the under surface of the tongue is examined, and the sublingual veins are generally found to be considerably swollen. They are opened, and the blood is allowed to flow until it stops itself. The patient is then ordered to take 25 grains of gentiana croclata. This is the strongest dose, but it should be varied according to the age and constitution of the patient, and the intensity of the disease. It should be cut up into small pieces, and pounded in a mortar with water until a clear solution is obtained. It should be taken during nine days consecutively, before breakfast in the morning. At the same time the bite should be treated in the following mannsr :--- If the patient has only been recently bitten, the wound should be washed with spirits of rosemary, and then dressed with a plaster composed of two portions of flour of rye and one portion of the wood of the juniper-tree finely pulverised, with a sufficient quantity of brandy to bring it to the consistence of a thick paste. If the wounds be deep and dangerous, then equal portions of the two first substances may be taken. If great the hydrophobia has already assumed a violent aspect, the patient must be encased in a strait waistcoat, in order to preent him from doing mischief either to himself or others. The with disturbances : above remedies must be applied, taking 30 grains of the root of gentiana crociata, instead of 25 grains. It will occasionally be found necessary to resort to force to induce the patient to swallow the medicine. At the expiration of three hours the dose must be repeated. Should the patient not come to his senses after the second dose, an entire root must be placed in his mouth with great precaution. The patient will chew it with avidity, and if he swallows the remainder of it, it may be looked upon as a favourable symptom. The veins should not will collect in the mouth, which it is very important, indeed essential, should be removed."

BURNING SPRING, IN THE TOWNSHIP OF BARTON.

(From the Hamilton Gazette.)

Having been providentially directed to this fountain, I, with my family, tarried here about a week, using the water both internally and externally; and I believe that I have derived son benefit from its use. The water, in color, resembles milk and water; in taste it is strongly sulphurous, and greatly impregwater; in tasie it is strongly sulphurous, and greatly impreg-nated with hydrogen gas, constantly bubbling up, like a pot of water boiling. On applying a lighted match, the surface of the water is instantly in a complete blaze, presenting to the view the singular natural phenomenon of water on fire!

The water of this fountain has, in my humble opinion, some excellent properties, and has, I am credibly informed, proved highly efficacious in the perfect cure of a varlety of diseases; among which is the case of an Officer in your town, whose name I have not received permission to mention,—who was greatly afflicted with rheumatic pains; so much so; as to be Bowed down with its sad effects, but who; after a six weeks liberal use of the water was enabled to return home, erect in person and tejoicing in the possession of good health.
