

(13) If the Ukrainian people should rise in defence of their nationality, and we were unsuccessful in destroying them or putting the uprising down, we must give the rebels up to the Tartars. The Tartars will be able to do away with them easily, and we will then settle Ukrainian territory with Polish peasants.

We have no need to fear that Russia will stand by the Ukrainians, because she hates the Greek Catholics more than we do. And even if she is inclined towards them, we will fix matters to suit ourselves.

In this way we will arrange so that the Polish kingdom will be inhabited by one nation united by love, peace, and harmony, that Roman Catholicism will progress by leaps and bounds, that we will grow stronger. For it must be well understood that if the Ukrainian race is left to exist, whether as Orthodox or Greek Catholics, our supremacy must always remain insecure. On the other hand if we Polonize them, it will in the first place destroy Russia's hope of taking them from us, and in the second place we will strengthen ourselves through them against Russia—in which God help us! Amen!
